DEAD!

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER,
BY WALDORF H. PHILLIPS.

Yes; it is over; all, all is over;
The agony's over, and under the clover
Calmly he's sleeping; sweetly he's sleeping,
For he is at rest, at home with the blest,
Peacefully sleeping, quietly sleeping,
Under the clover, the sweet scented clover.

There's where we first met, there's where we courted,
There's where we wedded, there's where we parted;
Parted for ever; parted for life.
Husband and wife, lover and beloved, lover,
Calmly is sleeping, sweetly is sleeping,
Under the clover, the sweet scented clover.

Oh! why should I weep, oh! why should I mourn,
When he is at rest, when he is so blest,
When he is asleep, free, free from all sorrow?
Calmly he's sleeping, no thought of the morrow,
Peaceful my sleeping, quietly sleeping,
Under the clover, the sweet scented clover.

Be still, oh, my heart! we meet but to part,
To meet once again, where parting is never;
Where there is no night, where there is all light,
And I pray for my rest, when I shall sleep,
Yes, by his side sleep, shall peacefully sleep,
Under the clover, the sweet scented clover.

CURIOSITIES OF THE IRISH STAGE.

BY FRANK HASLEHAM.

Few subjects should be more capable of being treated in a popular form than the one we have placed at the head of this paper. This would be quite true if it were not one of the properties of over-much wealth to be embarrassing, and if a magazine article had not certain limits. All things considered, we shall perhaps best attain our present object—which, of course, is to entertain the reader—by confining our attention to a single epoch in the history of that most characteristic of institutions, the Irish Stage. And if, for that purpose, we make choice of a somewhat sensational period—a period when not only was the Irish genius for theatricals at its height, but when party politics, as if in pure sympathy, were fought out night after night in various parts of the house, and when, even the stage door was not secure from any impassioned and riotous lounger that sported ruffles and had a sword to draw—who shall say us nay?

By way of making a sudden plunge into the subject, it was the "Beef Steak Club" that caused the shindy.

"And what was the "Beef Steak Club?" asks the enquiring but accomodating reader.

Well, that's just it. Or, to mend the record, if it wasn't the "Beef Steak Club," it was Peg Woffington; or again, if it wasn't either individually, it was both collectively. Peg, be it remembered, had at this particular date (while our great-grandfathers were to the fore), begun, and something more than begun, to unveil those beauties, and display those graces, accomplishments of mind and person, which gave no sign of ever ceasing to charm mankind. It was in 1758, while Peg's star was yet in the ascendant, that Sheridan, the father of the brilliant wit and dramatist of that immortal name, founded the "Beef Steak Club" in connection with the Theatre Royal, Dublin, of which he was then patentee and manager. There was a club of similar kind, of ancient institution, in every theatre, when the principal performers dined one day in the week together (generally Saturday), and authors and other literary persons were admitted members. But in the club instituted by Sheridan, no one as members of Parliament, Court; for Sheridan used to be wonderfully fond of a smile at the Castle Levee. The only lady admitted was Mistress Woffington, who was placed in a great chair at the head of the table and elected president.

It may be easily imagined that a club which could boast of good accommodations, of such a bewitching president, and with nothing to pay, mus: soon become remarkably fashionable. It did so—and the consequence proved fatal. Peg was delighted with the novelty of her situation, and had wit and spirit to support it. The table was constantly filled with her friends, who happened all to be comedians, and on not a glass of wine was at that time drank in Ireland without first naming the toast, it is easy to guess at the sort of toasts constantly given at this club. Futhermore, as several persons from the opposite party were introduced by their friends as occasional visitors, the conversation and toasts of this weekly assembly became the common talk of the town, and the manager was severely censured for being the supporter of it, as he certainly was, being the person who paid for all. At length, in consequence, politics ran inconveniently high, as is sufficiently testified by a memorandum from Sheridan's deputy-manager (Victor), to Garrick, then in London:—"The Theatre," he writes, "and all public diversions (!) have greatly suffered from these commotions: even Mrs. Woffington has lost her influence, and has the misfortune to exhibit to empty boxes."

The crisis was not slow to come. On the 24 of February, 1754, "Mahomet" was announced on the playbills, with Sheridan, Mrs. Woffington, and a host of others of some note, named Diggs, in the principal characters. During the rehearsal, several passages had been talked of by the Anti-Court party as pleasing them, and no secret had been made of their intention of marking their appreciation of them at the performance that evening. Accordingly, when Diggs (who played Alcanor), spoke the following speech:—

> "If, ye powers divine,
> Ye mark the movements of this nether world,
> And bring them to account, crush, crush those vipers,
> Who, singled out by the community,
> Upon the scaffold of the basest trade of sale,
> Or, rather, office, sell them to the foe!"

all the party in the pit roared out "encore," which was continued with such violence that the actor had to repeat the highly seasoned lines.

Here was a pretty breach of theatrical discipline. In his endeavor to heal it; Sheridan summoned the company to the green-room, and severely blamed, one and all, Diggs in particular, with a lecture on the impropriety of encouraging party feeling on the stage. "If," he said, "it be once established as a rule, that one part of the audience has a right to encore a speech, another part of them may claim the same right; and in that case, is not an actor certain of disobliging one party or the other, and consequently liable to the resentment or ill treatment of one or the other?" All this was reasonable enough, but Diggs wanted to know what were the manager's commands in regard to his conduct on the ensuing evening. "Should he, or should he not comply with the demand for a repetition of the speech?" Sheridan's answer was that "he left him to act as he thought proper." The speech being again encored with much vehemence, Diggs, after motioning to be heard, begged "which he would be so good as to excuse him, as his compliance would be grossly injurious to him." There was an immediate shout of "Sheridan, Sheridan!" The manager, the manager!" and this cry soon became universal from all parts of the house. After some short time, Diggs made his exit, and the manager ordered the curtain down and sent on the prompter to acquaint the audience that "they were ready to perform the play if they were willing to go on in quiet." The prompter was not heard and he was withdraw. The cry was still "Sheridan!" but the manager said to his friends behind the scenes:—"They have no right to call upon me; I will not obey their call; I will go up to my room and undress myself." And so he did. Some friends of his in the front of the house went into his dressing-room after him and entreated him to endeavor to pacify the audience. But he remained unmoved, and being at length harassed beyond patience, a constable was intended him, he ordered a sedan chair and went home, leaving the house in the utmost uproar and confusion.

In this tumult the lovely Peg was persuaded to appear and to try what influence a fine woman could have on an enraged multitude. But this was only adding fuel to the fire, as Peg's political connexions were very well known. The charmer found her spell broken and she retired.

As Diggs was the occasion favorite, he was desired to assure the audience that Sheridan had laid him under no injunction not to repeat the speech in question, and, therefore, could not, on that account, have injurred their displeasure.

But it was in vain. The house had so long called for Sheridan that they now insisted on having him before them, and on his appearing for himself. When they were told he had positively gone home, they demanded that he should be sent for. They added that they could wait patiently for an hour, as he was known to live at some distance; and accordingly they all down quietly to amuse themselves. Messengers were sent to Sheridan, but he refused for return.

The house being now in the vigorest renewed their call, and after continuing it some time, they fell to demolishing the house, and in the meantime the audience part was all in pieces. Not satisfied with this, some moved to fire the house, while others should attack the ward-robe, in an instant a party leaped upon the stage, and with their swords, cut and slashed the drop scene, which was finely painted, and had cost a great sum of money. They broke open the doors of the dressing rooms that had not been open before, and in the former they met with no opposition, leaving the box-doors dangered the scenes, &c., as well as breaking the whole of the apartment, and there laid some of the broken box-doors upon it; and furthermore the intended mischief was soon in full force.

Thus terminated this extraordinary theatrical riot. The upshot was that Sheridan quitted Dublin for two years, after which, on returning to his native country, he had to encounter a party, after all. Victor (whose grievous mention of "Beef Steak Club" has led us astray), adds that "Even if Diggs had quietly remained with the encore, it would only have delayed the evil, for the Anti-Court party were so incensed against Sheridan, on account of the "beef steak club" that they would have created some other occasion for bringing matters to a crisis."

Among the numerous sudden appearances in fronted of sensation scenes, which have always been the rage upon the British stage, we must mention the debut of the great tragedian, Booth. As many of our readers are probably aware, Booth had been educated at Westminster preparatory to entering for the University, but having a passion for the stage he applied to Betterton, who duly refused to engage him, not wishing to disoblige his friends. This made Booth resolve for Ireland, where he made his first appearance in "Oroonoko," and acquitted himself so much to the satisfaction of a crowded audience that the manager made him a present of five guineas, which was the more acceptable as his last shilling had begun to melt away. There is a story told of that maiden effort of Booth's which is worth re-producing. While he was waiting to go on in the last scene, it being warm weather, he inadvertently wiped his face, which gave him the appearance of a chimney sweep, and occasioned a variety of noises in the audience on his entrance. This at first a little confounded him (for he knew not what he had done) till an extraordinary clap of applause settled his mind. The next night an actress fitted a crape covering to his face, but one part of it slipped off in the first scene, and "zounds!" said he (for he was a little apt to swear), "I looked like a magpie; they lamp blacked me for the rest of the night and I was flayed before I could get it off again."

Here, too, Wilks made his first appearance. His part was Othello, the other characters being taken by officers belonging to the castle. Wilks acted with the utmost applause, and, as he remarked years afterwards:—"Pleased everybody but himself."

About this time an incident occurred which throws some light upon Freemasonry in the theatrical profession in those early days. In 1731 the brethren in Dublin bespoke "Cato," the male characters being acted by members of the fraternity. The prices were advanced, and so crowded and brilliant an audience had never been seen in Dublin. One of the members of the corps dramatique was an actor of very undersized proportions. "Little Griffith," who was also secretary to the grand lodge, and greatly beloved by the brotherhood. His benefits were in consequence bespoken by the Grand Master, who, attended by his brethren, walked at the head of the procession to the theatre, and as many of them as possible were accommodated with chairs upon the stage on those nights. This circumstance ensured Brother Griffith a full house on both sides of the curtain, from which and his gold tickets he reaped great emolument. But Brother Griffiths' debut had scarcely been so promising. The "Indian Emperor" having been ordered to be played on a sudden, Griffith, with some difficulty procured the part of Pizarro. Betterton, being a little indisposed had not attended rehearsal, and in the evening, when he came ready at the entrance, his ears were struck with a voice not familiar to him, and casting his eyes on the stage, he beheld the diminutive Brother Griffith with a truncheon as long as himself. "What sucking scaramouch have you sent on there?" cried Betterton to the prompter. "Sir," replied that functionary, "He's good enough for a Spaniard, and the part is but small." "If it had been but two lines," said Betterton, "It would have been too much for such a monkey in buskins." Poor Griffith stood on the stage near the door and heard every word of this brief dialogue. He knew who was meant by it, but happily he had no more to speak in that scene. At the end of the first act he went to make an excuse to Betterton, and said:—"Indeed, sir, I had not taken the part, but there was only I alone out of the play." "I! I!" said Betterton, laughing, "Thou art but the tittle of an I, and after this night let me never see a truncheon in thy hand again, unless to stir the fire." Brother Griffith took this advice, laid aside the buskin, and stuck to the sock (in which he made a figure equal to most of his contemporaries) and lived to be secretary to Grand Lodge, and had a tip-top benefit whenever he wanted one.

It is not often we have met with a neater fling at place-mongering than this. When Elvington was yet a young actor, he desired to play a certain character which the player, and asked the manager his opinion. "Why, my lord," said he, "it is not with us as with you; your lordship is sensible there is no difficulty in filling places at court; you cannot be at a loss for persons to act their part there, but I assure you it is quite otherwise in our theatrical world; if we should invest people with characters which they were unable to support, we should be undone." Young Elvington fared none the worse for beginning his professional life under so judicious a manager, for, in a few years afterwards he was in a position to decline a lucrative offer from the manager of Drury Lane. "I am truly sensible" he wrote "of the value of your offer, but in Ireland I am so well rewarded for my services that I cannot think of leaving it on any consideration. There is not a gentleman's house to which I am not a welcome visitor."

We have another instance of the friendly relations subsisting between the castle and the theatre, in the practice of opening the season with a "government play." The manager used to receive a certain sum annually from government for the performance of plays on particular nights. On these nights the ladies were always complimented with the freedom of the boxes, but only those of the first rank and distinction availed themselves of this privilege. This custom was established on the first rise of the stage in Ireland, and so essentially necessary was the presence of the Lord Lieutenant considered on these occasions, that Nov. 4th, 1714, "Tamerlane," which was usually acted on that evening out of compliment to the memory of William III, was, "by command," not to begin till an entertainment given by the city to the Lord Lieutenant was over. The following note, however, from Victor to Garrick seems to point to some abuse of this privilege:—"We shall be obliged to you," he wrote, "if in your next letter you will inform us who are the persons belonging to the Royal Family that claim the liberty of your theatre—I mean, if any, and who, every play night? We all know there are an appointed number when the King or any of the Royal Family goes to the house. The reason of this inquiry is to form some application to the Lord Lieutenant to redress the insupportable grievance this theatre labors under. Now it is an old custom here for the government to pay £100 a year for the governor and his court; and as the Theatre Royal is now under new management, a list has been made out (I suppose at the secretary's office) of 92 persons who claim a free seat in the theatre every night, if they please to demand it." David's answer to this note ought to have been very good, and we regret we cannot lay our hands on it.

In juxta position with the foregoing, the following item of intelligence from the General Advertiser has a somewhat odd effect:—"November 30th, 1737—Both theatres were closed six weeks by order of the Lord-Lieutenant, on account of the death of Queen Caroline." The poor players did not want this additional stroke of ill fortune at the beginning of a season.

But we must not finally lose sight of incomparable Peg Woffington. Her unpopularity on account of the "Beef Steak Club" had long since died away, and Peg was once more the reigning toast of the town. Colly Cibber, who corresponded with Victor, had not failed to transmit to him exact accounts of the immense favor she had met with in London; but as Cibber retained the air of a lover long after the age of seventy, Victor attributed his praises of her to the excess of passion. Sheridan, who had not seen her act for many years, was not readily persuaded that her abilities was superior to those of Mrs. Bland, who was then in articles with him. However, being pressed to it, he engaged her, for one season only, at £400, which proved a very fortunate circumstance for him. She appeared in but four or her characters (Sir Harry Wildair and Lady Townley being two of them), when the proceeds of her performances of each of the four amounted altogether to £4,000. The Irish stage had never previously reaped such a harvest from four old stock plays. In the Gentleman's Magazine for December, 1751, there are some pretty good verses, either written by Mrs. Woffington or in her name. It appears that the Duke of Dorset kissed her on April 4th, 1748. It was customary with that wicked Peg to petition somebody or other for a kiss once every year.

Garrick's first appearance in Dublin was in the summer time of 1742. He opened in "Richard III," followed by "Lear" and "Hamlet." His name drew crowds, and more were obliged to return than could gain admittance. His success exceeded all imagination. During the hottest months of the year the theatre was thronged with persons of the first consequence." No wonder the excessive heat proved fatal to many, and the epidemic distemper which prevailed was called the "Garrick fever." For did Garrick's second visit to Dublin show any falling off in popularity. He undertook this second engagement at the instance of Sheridan himself, though there had been a sort of rivalship and coolness between them during a previous season in London. Nevertheless, Sheridan wrote to him and offered to divide the profits of the theatre with him, as the easiest and most necessary expedient, frankly adding at the same time that "he must expect nothing from his friendship;" but "all that the best actor had a right to command, he might be certain would be granted." It was only natural that Garrick, who was at Colonel Fitzwilliam's when he received this letter, should have handed it to the colonel with the remark:—"This is the oddest epistle I ever saw in my life." Nor was the colonel's opinion of it wide of the mark. "It may be an odd one," he rejoined, "but it is surely an honest one; I should certainly depend upon a man who treated me with such openness and simplicity of heart." A triumphant and decidedly pleasant season was the result.

It seems scarcely creditable, though strictly true, that, not long before Sheridan's time, the actors' salaries were so low as to be hardly sufficient for their support. Even in his younger days not receiving more than 8 guineas. Miserable as these pittances were, the unfortunate players many weeks received not half their suppositive demands. At one time the acting managers were so reduced in their finances and ashamed in their wealth that they were obliged to repair to the theatre on the evening of a play dinnerless. The first shilling that came into the house they despatched for some kitchen cheer, the second for bread, the third for ale, the fourth for "drink," and so on till they had satisfied the demands of nature.

But, dinner or no dinner, there was always a relish of a real bit of Irish fun, with a sample of which we must close this paper. Williamson tells us in his waverin sing memoirs that he went one evening to see a pantomime which concluded with a dance. Miss Archbold, the principal dancer, took out, as usual, only a select portion of one of the pit tier. At one time capering between the two parties, she was seized with a violent cramp, and fell prostrate on the stage. Whereupon a really thoughtful man, some young and childless would have flung her over his shoulder. It was, of course, highly necessary to let the curtain immediately drop, so as to relieve the lady from her distressed situation and lack of garments. It was some time, however, before the audience recovered from their continued impulse of merriment, nor would they leave the theatre till the band played them out with the well-known old tune called "Petticoat Loose."

There, with a national stage abounding in stories of this turn of humor, what becomes of Mr. Disraeli's singular theory about the Irish temperament being gloomily affected by the "melancholy ocean?"

SUMMER FLOWERS.

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER,
BY ELSIE MAY.

Gather the blossoms and cherish the flowers,
Nestle the sweetest in summer's bright hours;
Wreathe the fairest garlands of love on thy brow,
Ere they shall wither that bloom for thee now!

Summer is passing and soon will decay
Flowers that now scatter their sweets on thy way.
Thus in life's sun mar. Oh! win for thine own
Buds of rich beauty that 'round thee are strown.

Cherish those sweetest buds, Faith, Hope and Love,
Fully they'll blossom in gardens above.
Haste! ere the leaves are touched by the blight,
Life's summer ending in death's wintry night.

NELLIE WILDLOVE.

A ROMANCE OF HUDSON'S BAR.

TOLD BY AN OUTSIDE PASSENGER.

The Stockton stage coach, drawn by four-in-hand, was slowly wending its way through one of the canons of the Sierras in the Southern Mines one beautiful May afternoon, loaded down with a party of eastern tourists, on their way to the Big Trees and Yosemite, by way of Sonora, which has been appropriately named "the Gem of the Southern Mines." The declining sun threw a golden haze over the eastern slopes of the scarred hills and bluffs that rose sternly from the darkening ravines. A rabbit, frightened from its supper by the roadside, sprang nimbly away in front of the horses, and the quail whistled merrily in the undergrowth—all of which, combined with the solitude and loneliness of the spot, had a drowsy effect upon the travelers, and many were nodding in their seats. The driver, a genial, communicative individual, who had driven on that line for years, glanced around upon the passengers who sat upon the top of the coach, and wishing a change, cut at those nodding heads with his whip, and in a sharper, cut at those nearest him. His general appearance was not at all prepossessing to the reader of human nature, although he was well educated to operate successfully in his "profession." The residents of the Bar discovered shortly after their arrival that the names of the two travelers, as written upon the hotel register, were "George Wildlove and lady," but no persons were without designated "ladies" in those days, the hotel hunger call be guessed he meant she was the wife.

"The two new arrivals soon came out in their true colors. He was a gambler and also a dirt and coquette. In the wild, free life of the mines, such things were taken as a matter of course, and a hundred rough men would have given all their pocket for a smile from Nellie Wildlove. The handsome Creole woman exerted over them an overwhelming fascination, and never took her seat at the table in the Arcade Saloon, for she always had company, but what conversation with some rich Monsieur or Jack Shifter, who carried a roaring claim below the dam, or the creaking wheels and rattling harness, roused them-selves to listen to the stranger's narrative.

"If you have no objection, sir, we would like to hear the story," said a Boston merchant who occupied a seat next to the Californian.

"Well, commenced the passenger addressed, "you probably noticed, a short distance back, a collection of ruined adobes situated near the creek that runs along here. That collection of deserted huts was once a thriving mining camp, filled with men of every character from all parts of the world, seeking that all-absorbing object of the day—gold. The town—for it boasted 'Bella Union' Hotel, post office, and a dozen or saloons, besides the log cabins and places of business of the inhabitants—was called Hudson's Bar, and did not enjoy the most enviable reputation for law and order. During the spring of '63 there came to Hudson's Bar two persons, from no one knew where, who exerted a great influence upon the community almost as soon as they alighted in front of the hotel. One of them was a woman, and such a woman. Beauty is no name for the charms she possessed. A deep, blue eye that sparkled like a snake's and seemed to look you through and through; a face which was that of a child's in appearance, surrounded by waving yellow hair, that hung like a cascade of amber over her shoulders, which, like the rest of her form, were beautifully rounded and of delicate mould. Her companion was a man whom manner indicated the man of the world, and who, with a sharper, one of those men who, in California, are known as "entire strangers," at once. His general appearance was not at all prepossessing to the reader of human nature, although he was well educated to operate successfully in his "profession." The residents of the Bar discovered shortly after their arrival that the names of the two travelers, as written upon the hotel register, were "George Wildlove and lady," but no persons were without designated "ladies" in those days, the hotel hunger call be guessed he meant she was the wife.

"Hudson's Bar was before my time," said the driver, as he threw his long lash over the back of the near wheel horse.

"Yes, you commenced mining in '27, and the bar's palmy days were in '54," returned the other.

"Perhaps the gentlemen wouldn't mind listening to that Wildlove yarn, Bill, and as we've got an hour or so before sun-down it will help to pass the time," insinuated the driver, who hoped to draw his friend out and keep his passengers awake, as well as relieve himself of the tiresome senseless questions propounded by his "outsiders."

"Sam, you know I very seldom touch on that subject; you never heard me tell the story but once, and that was on a journey similar to the present; but for the benefit of these gentlemen, who are strangers here, I will relate it. It will serve to illustrate the passions that swayed men in those days." The passengers, who had become weary of the drowsy monotony of the ride, listening to the creaking wheels and rattling harness, roused themselves to listen to the stranger's narrative.

"If you have no objection, sir, we would like to hear the story," said a Boston merchant who occupied a seat next to the Californian.

P. G. G., Keokuk.—"A player is on first base and tries to steal second, when half way to second, the umpire gives the striker his first on three called balls; the catcher throws to second, and cuts off the man who was going to the second base, and the umpire calls 'out at second.' I claim that the decision was wrong, for, that as runner on third had a right to run home as no longer standing second, but was legally entitled to that base. How is it?"——1. You are right and the umpire was wrong. 2. We did not decide the man out in the Baltimore case, but the very reverse, i. e.—that he was entitled to his base. 3. No rule was adopted of that kind.

MERRY READER, Columbia, Iowa.—"1. A ball is knocked foul, strikes a building, and rolls back on a stoop attached to said house, and is taken by the catcher before touching the ground. Is the striker out? 2. In what case is a 'passed' ball charged against the catcher? 3. Did the Ward brothers ever cross the ocean to row a race? 4. Is there a horse in this country or England weighted at 1,300lbs?"——1. He is out. 2. When a base is run on a passed ball, not otherwise. 3. No. 4. We don't know of such a horse.

HORACE GREELEY.—"Snakey works at his trade and is a member of a junior club. He cannot get off to play matches without losing the time. His club pay him a certain sum to make up for lost time at each match. Moneyless bets Max that Snakey is a professional player, on the ground that he, Max, receives pay from the club for lost time. Snakey claims he cannot be called a professional," as he receives pay for lost time and not for his service. Who wins?"——He is not a professional, as he does not make it his business.

J. A. R., Philadelphia, Pa.—Skill in bowling at cricket consists in judging of the style of the batsman, whether he is in the habit of playing forward or backward, drives or slips, his length of reach, and so pitching the ball at a length and in a direction to aim to hit; also without apparent laxity or extra exertion, to deliver at slower or faster speed, so as to puzzle or deceive him. If well in, and keeping good guard, it is well sometimes to play him by a catch in the slips, by well-timed hitting, or well-judged.

INQUIRER, New Orleans.—"1. When will the judiciary committee meet to decide the game of 7 to 4 between the Baltimores and Athletics? 2. In case the Athletics score more games than the Bostons, but no series, and the Bostons fewer games, but one series, to which club would the championship be awarded? 3. What is the uniform of the Athletics? 4. Is it prohibited this year in the rules for a player to drop a ball on purpose to make a point, as formerly?"——We cannot say. 2. The most games win, series not counting. 3. Blue and white. 4. No.

A. B. F., Ottawa, C. W.—1. Those who had the management of the affair are not empowered to make public reports upon any choose, and to alter them if they saw proper—provided no entrance fee was charged. 2. The company which failed to comply with the conditions adopted by the committee forfeits all claim to the money. 3. Answered by parties who were unaware of the change made in the conditions are off.

BOATMAN.—If the rules governing the race stated that it was to be rowed in working boats, the oarsmen who rowed in any other kind of craft are not entitled to either of the prizes, no matter what may have been their position in the race. It was not necessary that the objection to style of boat should have been made before the start. The man who pulled in a working boat is entitled to first prize only.

JERSEY CITE.—1. The fastest recorded passage from Liverpool to New York is 8 days 21 hours and 37 minutes, by the Inman steamer City of Brussels, arriving Dec. 30th, 1869. 2. Not recorded. The trade wind has sailed from San Francisco to New York in 84 days.

OLD SUBSCRIBER, Gilmer, Tex.—1. The Biglin crew rowed a crews at Lake Quinsigamond, July 19th, 1867, was as follows:—Harvard, 18:12¾; Yale, 19:25¾. 2. Walter Brown did not row five miles each, but he pulled three miles against time, in 25:00. 3. He is dead. 4. The best recorded time for five miles, single scull, is 25:10, by Josh Ward.

J. C., Cincinnati.—Yes. Wall Street finished in the trial at Fleetwood Park on the 5th inst., as you will find on reference to the report in another column.

J. H. W., Philadelphia.—There is no such machine that we are aware of.

J. J. K., Davenport, Iowa.—We do not at present require one. Brief items of news you may send if you choose, which will be thankfully received.

C. C., Brooklyn.—1. We know nothing of the parties. 2. It is not yet determined. 3. The Mace and O'Baldwin fight is for the championship.

W. H., Trenton, N. J.—Three trays and two sixes count eighteen at backgammon, viz., ten for three sixes, six for pair-royal, and two for a pair.

J. S. D., New Brighton, N. Y.—Only one can play a base hand at a time, and the player must not play alone against 3, who ordered up the trump and announced his intention of doing so.

FREEMAN, Hartford.—We have no means of procuring the information you desire.

FRED. Washington, D. C.—In jumping, the measurement must be made from toe to heel, being the actual distance cleared.

JOHNSTON, San Francisco, Cal.—Thank you, but we are already supplied.

RAPKIN, Kansas City, Mo.—We are already supplied by a prior applicant.

COUNSELLOR, Boston.—We hope to give you a definite answer in our next.

ARKANSAS TRAVELER.—It was filed for insertion at the time, but crowded out by other matter.

SEED AND HAVANA.—1. Jenny Lind was born in Sweden, and Adelina Patti at Madrid, Spain. 2. Cannot say.

A SUB.—Send to T. Allston Brown, 713 Broadway, for a copy of "The Showman's Guide."

L. ST. MARY.—Seven dollars and eighty cents for three months, cash in advance.

M. G., Washington, D. C.—The list is intended for persons of prominence only.

P. CAMERON.—We shall endeavor to find room for it at an early day.

"KYE."—Seventy-five sugar plums received, and put in to preserve.

W. H. P., N. Y. City.—Received, and will be used as opportunity offers.

W. FOTH, Philadelphia.—It is carelessly put together, and we have no time to re-write it.

PHIL. H. M., Philadelphia.—Scraps will probably be dished up in our next.

"HIGHTOWER," Baltimore.—The paper is sent to your address, regularly, every week, postage paid. Articles received.

H. A. DENLEY.—Thank you, but we have all of that kind of composition that we can spare room for.

TELEGRAPH.—Horace Greeley is now a democratic as well as a liberal republican candidate.

C. D., Pittsburgh, Pa.—James Hamill was beaten easily by Kelley in both of their sculling races at Newcastle, Eng.

T. S. H.—Having bet on both games and only one being played, the bets are off on both.

G. S., Buffalo.—1. No record. 2. None are engaged. 3. The question has not yet been settled.

A. W. F.—Both games not being played, the bets on the two games are off.

LEPTAS CASSIUS, Chicago, Ill.—Sig. Ferranta is traveling with the Central Park Menagerie.

SCOTT SCULL, Buffalo.—Unless prohibited by the rules governing the race, he had a perfect right to do so.

J. T. S.—It is not a draw unless a proviso was made to the effect referred to.

J. S. EXPERT.—You had a right to place a new pitcher in every inning if you chose. They forfeit the game 9 to 0.

O. L., Boston.—1. and 2. It must share the gains and losses equally.

J. LINDSAY, Chicago, Ill.—It is not our intention to republish it in that form.

J. H. D., Flaiston, N. H.—Goldsmith Maid's fastest time at Milwaukee, last year, was 2:17. This year she has trotted in 2:16¾.

FALKENBURG, Utica.—2, having induced C to bet by false representations, cannot win. The bet is drawn.

J. S., West Haven, Conn.—Liverpool, Eng., has a population of 493,346, and Manchester of 345,668.

J. C. E., Syracuse.—1. Dexter's best record, and such governs all bets, is 2:17¼.

F. Y.—It being an irregularly shaped track, you must employ a surveyor to measure it.

J. B., Philadelphia.—There are no recognized rules for the government of the game, and we cannot decide the point.

SUBS.—In throwing raffles, three sixes beat three aces. Aces are the lowest that can be thrown.

ORSASO.—A's horse, having trotted in better than three minutes, wins the bet.

LONGFELLOW, New Brunswick.—He cannot do it; such a claim is ridiculous.

YOU BET, Cincinnati.—A must deal again, as C cannot lose his bet.

FRED. FOAM, Plymouth, Mich.—You have forgotten to state what you bet about.

L. W. P., Kenny, Gallipolis, O.—You send route ahead, but do not give name of town.

W. H. L., N. Y. C. Railroad.—He stops playing as soon as he makes his full complement of points.

SUBSCRIBER.—Consider cash received by us a settlement in full to date.

J. H. R., East Cambridge, Mass.—There is a Peck slip in New York, but we do not know of any Pike slip.

IRAN BLAIR, Harrisburg, Pa.—The Nation is published at 5 Park row, E. L. Godkin, editor.

FIVE YEARS SUBSCRIBER.—You can probably obtain what you wish through Ed. James, who advertises.

A SARATOGA SUBSCRIBER.—Letter referred to Judge C. B. Elliott, Stephen Roberts, or Ingersoll & Co., in our care.

T. E. HILL.—The first fight between Jim Mace and Tom King was won by the former.

ALLEGANY.—Heenan did knock King out of time, in the 17th round.

PETROLEUM, Pleasantville, Pa.—It was Mrs. Sol. Smith Russell (Georgie Sergent) and not Miss Anna Berger, that did it.

HICKORY TREE.—The lively reply will be given in our next issue.

H. A. SWEAR, Philadelphia.—It will be published at an early day.

PIPER, Fawlet, Vt.—We know nothing of the man's character.

T. F. KEARNAN, Philadelphia.—There is no largest in this city.

T. E. Z., Monongahela City, O.—You are quite right in raising.

TONY PASTOR.—No horse ever ran a mile in a minute.

ELISABETH, N. J.—Harry Wright is 25 years of age.

DAVID J. H., Wheeling, W. Va.—Thank you.

DR. JOSS.—Nineteen dollars and fifty-six cents.

S., Hartford.—See answer to H. D. W., above.

C. E. W., Norfolk, Va.—Respectfully declined.

J. SAVANNAH, Philadelphia.—Declined.

WATSON.—Received; thanks for the same.

J. C. R.—See answer to "Clipper Reader."

BAD STOCKING, Brownsville.—Cannot say.

A. R.—Christine, Emeline and Alice.

JOHN PARKER.—No, thank you.

BALL PLAYER, Troy.—A wins.

T. T. M.—No, he is not.

THE CAMPAIGN OPENED.

With the nomination of Horace Greeley by the Baltimore convention, the political campaign of 1872 may be said to have fairly opened. The Presidential struggle is to be a two-handed set-to between a civilian and a military chieftain, in which each will be seconded by the drawal from the fight of all sideshowmen leaves a free and unobstructed field for the two candidates to manœuvre in, and for their respective backers to refresh and recuperate their principals in. There are those who affect to ridicule the nomination of neighbor Greeley, but with the double nomination at Cincinnati and Baltimore, the Woodpecker of Chappaqua enters upon the race under very encouraging auspices; and if he were certain to receive the united support of the democracy, as well as that of all the liberals, his chances for a four years' sojourn at the White House would be really enviable; but in the uncertainty attending the movements of the soreheads of both sides lies the probabilities of the defeat of the gentleman in the white hat. These soreheads are never to be relied on; if they leave one party to-day, and tie up with another to-morrow, it is ten chances to one that they organize an independent coalition the next day, and when election day comes around these disorganizers are as likely as not to be found ranged on the side of their first love. At present the outlook would seem to give assurance that the democrats are more earnest in their support of the woodpecker than are the liberals. There is no use in trying to deny the fact that General Grant carries some heavy guns, that he has the aid of an army of well-disciplined and experienced followers, with the financial sinews in good condition to meet the expenses of the campaign. The great battle ground will probably be Pennsylvania, and to carry this state in October, every man will be brought up to the front, and money without stint will be expended; for as goes the state election, so in all probability will follow the presidential. It is going to be a spirited contest all around, and as Grant knows how to hold his tongue, and as Horace can be taught to keep quiet, the work of the battle will be left to the subordinates. We shouldn't advise neighbor Greeley to rely on chopping trees at Chappaqua altogether, although he may be kept out of mischief while performing this manual labor of love. As we have before remarked, it is going to be a good betting race, as may be seen by the wagers already made on the general result, as well as upon state issues. Greeley and Grant had better steer clear of the Carl Schurz confederation, for they bode no good. It is nearly four months before the election will come to a head; in the meantime circumstances may transpire to alter the entire aspect of the situation, and the boys would do well to trim their sails close to the wind, and not venture too deep in their investments until the political horizon is a little more clearly defined.

FAST TROTTERS.

The recent defeat of the irrepressible Goldsmith Maid by American Girl has caused considerable horse-talk in sporting circles, to the disparagement, no doubt, of the Maid. That she should have met with defeat on a New York track, where, it was expected, she might equal her previous performances, was unfortunate, to say the least, as it seemed to verify the predictions of turf experts that she would not be able to keep up her reputation when brought fairly and squarely before a New York assemblage on a New York track. We should have been pleased to see her repeat her performance of 2:16¼, which is still the fastest mile, at trotting, on record. The excuse given for her withdrawal after she had been beaten in two heats was that she had sustained a crack in one of her hind feet, and, for the want of reliable evidence to the contrary, we must accept this as the cause of her "let down." This week the second annual meeting of the Cleveland Club takes place, on which several horses of national repute are announced to participate, including Goldsmith Maid, Lucy, American Girl and Henry; $3,300 in premium are offered, and a special purse of $2,000 is to be given for the horse beating Goldsmith Maid's Milwaukee time—2:17—which, it is said, Bud Doble will do his best to carry off. We do not like the looks of this quartet of fast trotters traveling together for purses; and public confidence is shaken in the sincerity and honesty of the trials of speed in which they act a part, it is so easy to make some "little arrangement" by which the knowing ones can scoop in bushels of money when the outside betting is of such a character as to induce a "throw off" by the steerers of the favorite. We do not say that this will really be done, but the fruits of the "enterprise" will bear this inference. We should like to see the much-vaunted merits of Goldsmith Maid put fairly to the test, which they would be in a trial of speed with Dexter or Joe. Elliott; Mr. Bonner objects to trotting his horses for money, but we think this objection might be waived, without Mr. Bonner stultifying himself, in the case of a contest between either of his horses and Goldsmith Maid for a liberal purse to be presented by the winner to some poor and deserving charitable institution. Let the admittance be free, so that poor as well as rich admirers of the horse may be enabled to witness what would undoubtedly prove to be the most wonderful trotting contest on record.

LONG EARS are considered handsome in Peru, the longer the handsomer. How fascinating must the Jackass be there then.

HOW'S THIS.—One of our exchanges that ought to know better says that on the afternoon of the 4th a horse-muscle was a cool and shady place" in Union Square, this city, marked 104 degrees. What we cannot understand is, how any spot can be cool with the thermometer at such a high figure.

THE CRUSHING DEFEAT sustained by the champion Athletics at the hands of the Matusis, in New York, can be solely attributed to hunger, as an Irish friend of ours remarks, "seeing that they had nothin' to ate since they left home."

THE HOUSE OF REFUGE BOYS are on their muscle. They had another skirmish with their keepers the other day, and when the House of Refuge youths were hemmed in, they took refuge in the house.

"OUR JIM," who has been studying politics since Greeley's nomination, says that when Senator Sumner got up to make his great speech against Grant, it reminded him of "the last rose of Sumner."

IN VIEW of the Athletics' victories on their own grounds, and their defeats abroad, would it be out of place to designate the new nine as the "Home Guard Champions?"

MOSQUITOES have opened their pick nick season in a most formidable manner; being insects of keen penetration, they never fail to give the people a taste of their quality.

POLITICAL SPEAKERS must be extremely hard up just now, for we notice that they are all "pledging" their own states.

GRATZ BROWN, hard-shell liberal, has been laid up after indulging in soft-shell crabs. He promises not to do so any more.

SENATOR DOOLITTLE threatens to do a good deal in support of neighbor Greeley.

OUR NATIONAL RIFLE-MEN.—Uncle Sam's peculating office holders.

NEWS OF THE WEEK BOILED DOWN.

 The trial of Edward S. Stokes was brought to a close on July 13th, when the case was given to the jury, who went out at 3:30 P. M., but returned at 5 P. M. and demanded Fisk's clothes. At 7 P. M. Judge Ingraham announced that he would take a recess till 9:30 A. M. on the 14th, and the jury was locked up for the night. Upon the reassembling of the court the jury stated that they were unable to come to any agreement. The judge then stated that as the case was one which occupied three weeks in its trial he would have to have some time longer, and they were locked up again over night. At 10:20 A. M. on the 15th inst. Judge Ingraham took his seat and the jury shortly after came in. The judge asked if they had agreed, and the foreman said they had not and could not agree, whereupon they were discharged. Judge Ingraham feeling convinced that their disagreement must be on some material principle. Stokes was then taken charge of by Sheriff Brennan, and again incarcerated in the Tombs. The jury, it is stated, stood on the first ballot seven for murder in the first degree, three for acquittal and two for manslaughter in the second degree, and on the second and final ballot, seven for murder and five for manslaughter in the third degree.

DAVIS, Ira B.—For thirty years a leading radical "reformer" in this country, and well known to the public from his impetuous appearance on occasions of public excitement. As far back as 1847 he took an active part in political meetings in New York. He belonged to the democratic party, and was one of the prominent agitators who carried the Locofoco banner in the City Hall park in meetings, was a socialist of the communist school, but engaged in several "union store" schemes. He was at the head of the union bakery that was established in New York some years ago, but flourished for but a time. One of his pet plans for relieving the country of its troubles was the new democracy or referendum. During the past year he had been a leading internationalist—peacemaker, bracketed with Victoria Woodhull and Tennie C. Claflin—and reported unanimously in its favor, it was rejected by the senate.

 A difficulty occurred at Alexandria, Egypt, on the 11th inst., between G. H. Butler, the U. S. Consul General and Wadi Seifer, his secretary, on the one hand, and Ismail Ayoub Pasha, Mahomed Tewfik, ex-Ministers of Foreign Affairs, and Mal. Campbell, ex-Confederate officers, now in the Khedive's service, on the other. Pistols were exchanged, Campbell being wounded. Butler clearing the Khedive's office with attempting to assassinate him, and he may be was the aggressor. The affair created great excitement.

 Great excitement was occasioned in the National Assembly at Versailles, France, on July 12th, by the proposed Constitution to increase the taxes by increasing the duties on household furniture. President Thiers defended the proposition, and his speech in its favor was greeted with cheers from the Left, and disapproval from the Right. Upon proceeding to explain his position at some future time, order was restored.

 The Democratic National Convention met at Baltimore, Md., in Ford's Opera House, on July 9th, and closed its session on the following day. Charles O'Conor declined the honor tendered him, and Horace Greeley and B. Gratz Brown—were accepted with but little dissent, and the nominations were afterwards made unanimous. On the afternoon of the 10th the National Committee met and elected Augustus Schell chairman.

 The Pioneer, a Cuban privateer, F. T. Norton commander, was brought into Newport, R. I., on July 8th, having been spoken off Point Judith by the revenue cutter Tuscarora. She was heavily armed and stocked with provisions and ammunition sufficient for a prolonged cruise. The secretary of the treasury ordered her detention.

THE CHAMPIONSHIP RECORD.

The record of games won, lost, and played in the championship arena up to July 15th is as follows. We give the names of the clubs in the order of won games, as it is by the number of games won that the title to the streamer will be decided:—

	Won.	Lost.	Played.
Boston	22	5	27
Baltimore	18	9	27
Mutual	16	9	25
Athletic	14	9	23
Troy	13	10	23
Cleveland	6	14	20
Mansfield	5	11	16
Atlantic	3	11	14
Olympic	3	7	10
National	0	11	11
Rockford	0	11	11

Until August next little will be done in the arena, as most of the clubs will go in for "re-construction." Last week the fine second base player of the Atlantics, Jimmy Hall, was so severely spiked in the knee by a base runner that he will be disabled for some months. The Atlantics will, therefore, not play any important match until August. The Clevelands have not yet engaged Brainard, and they are hesitating as to how to place their nine for the fall campaign. By August the Olympic nine will probably be pretty well distributed. Brainard, Wiseman, Beals and others of the Olympians are not players that need be idle. Chicago is getting a nine together.

ATHLETIC vs. MUTUAL.
The Champions "Chicagoed."

Saturday, July 13th, 1872, will stand prominent in the annals of the Athletic Club, of Philadelphia, for on that day, while champions of the United States by right of a decision of the championship committee of 1871, their champion nine had to retire from the field after a full game of nine innings without being able to score a solitary run, while their opponents secured eight, chiefly by excellent play at the bat; the contest being one noteworthy for the few fielding errors committed and for the thoroughly impartial and excellent decisions of the umpire; moreover, the game was played on a fine ground and under very favorable conditions of weather, and in the presence of an orderly assemblage. The Philadelphia nine visited Brooklyn in full force, fully confident of the Athletics winning the game, for had they not a short time previously defeated the Mutuals by the remarkable score of 29 to 0, and if this could be done to a "creak nine" why could not a victory of only by a small score be accomplished? At any rate so thought the backers of the Philadelphia nine, including many New Yorkers, as their investments proved, a great number of pools selling at 50 to 25 and 50 to 20 on the Athletics. To those who had seen the Mutuals play in the last Troy match thought their defeat by the Athletics almost a certainty. By way of reference we give below the record of the defeats sustained by the two clubs thus far this season:—

May 30, Athletic vs. Baltimore, at Baltimore	4 to 7
June 1, Athleti: vs. Mutual, at Brooklyn	2 to 5
June 11, Athletic vs. Boston, at Boston	4 to 7
June 26, Athletic vs. Baltimore, at Baltimore	13 to 17
July 13, Athletic vs. Mutual, at Brooklyn	0 to 8
Total	25 46
April 22, Mutual vs. Baltimore, at Baltimore	5 to 16
May 8, Mutual vs. Boston, at Brooklyn	3 to 9
May 11, Mutual vs. Boston, at Boston	3 to 4
May 13, Mutual vs. Troy, at Brooklyn	3 to 5
June 8, Mutual vs. Athletic, at Philadelphia	0 to 19
June 10, Mutual vs. Boston, at Brooklyn	3 to 5
June 18, Mutual vs. Cleveland, at Cleveland	4 to 14
June 20, Mutual vs. Troy, at Chicago	4 to 13
July 1, Mutual vs. Atlantic, at Brooklyn	10 to 11
July 10, Mutual vs. Troy, at Brooklyn	4 to 7
Total	38 96

The record of clubs which have thus far been "Chicagoed" in champion games this season, is as follows:

April 8, Baltimore vs. Olympic, at Washington.....16 to 0
April 26, Troy vs. Mansfield, at Troy.....10 to 0
April 29, Mutual vs. Mansfield, at Brooklyn.....13 to 0
May 3, Boston vs. Eckford, at Brooklyn.....30 to 0
June 8, Boston vs. Baltimore, at Boston.....10 to 0
June 8, Athletic vs. Mutual, at Philadelphia.....19 to 0
July 1, Boston vs. Cleveland, at Boston.....17 to 0
July 13, Mutual vs. Athletic, at Brooklyn.....8 to 0

It will thus be seen that of the six regular clubs in the field the Boston and Troy nines have alone escaped the Chicago process. The Troy nine have been defeated by a score of 8 to 1, the Mutuals by 5 to 1, and the Athletics by 7 to 1, but neither have as yet been "Chicagoed," while the smallest score made by the Boston nine was 3, and than they won the game, the Bostons leading in "Chicagoing" other professional nines. They also defeated the King of Philos, of Bolton, by a score of 9 to 0, and the Philadelphia, 25 to 0. The Athletic and Mansfield Clubs thus far are the only clubs to score double figures against them.

Both clubs on Saturday had out their regular nines, as Pearce is now on the retired list, three New York players, Foster, Pinkham and but two New Yorkers composing the Mutual nine, the Athletics being all Philadelphians, except Treacy. Ferguson, who has proved himself to be one of the best professional umpires in the fraternity, was chosen to officiate, and Mr. McBride having lost the toss, sent Cuthbert to the bat and "play" was called.

THE GAME.

Cuthbert failed to hit the ball, and, having 0 runs to first base, was put out there by Hicks' throw. McBride was next, but gave Fulmer a chance to throw him out, and retired. Two out and nothing done. Pearce came to the front, and, after a ball to call him, he popped it up over towards Eggler's position, and as the latter ran in for it, it was thought to be safe, but Eggler caught it about six inches from the ground, on the run, the catch eliciting loud applause from all, for it was a beauty. Joe Overfield, older, Eggler led off at the bat with a safe hit, and, getting to his second by a high throw of Malone's, got home on the hits of Hatfield and Start, both of whom were wait thrown out by Fisler and McGeary. Mack fielding the last ball to the latter, the only one run in, with a blank for the Athletics, and with this lead the Mutuals went in to play a sure and safe game, and to keep down the efforts of their opponents.

The Athletics went in to their second innings quite indifferent as to scoring, and Fisler was retired on a fly to Pinkham. This time Malone led off, but the ball was too near Hatfield for comfort, and Fisler would have been second out but for a low throw of Boyd's, and as Start failed to stop the ball Fisler got to his second. Treacy then hit safely to right field and Fisler reached third. There were two men on each base and but one man out, and it looked sure for a run in; but Anson hit to Cummings and was thrown out. Fisler having no chance to run home, and as McGeary hit to Boyd, the latter immediately forced a second blank for the Athletics.....On the Mutual side Hicks led off with a good hit, but by Boyd's hit to McGeary Hicks was forced out at 2d, Boyd narrowly escaping at 1st. By a bad throw of Malone's to Fisler, Boyd made 2d base, and this, with Treacy's hit to Hatfield, retiring Boyd home. McMullen then tipped out, and Fulmer gave McGeary a chance to throw him out, the innings ending with another unearned run, and the score at 2 to 0 in favor of the Mutuals. This result was anything but to the taste of the Athletics' calculations, and they began to look a little serious. On the other hand the Mutuals were agreeably surprised at the hopeful appearance of things.

Mack opened fire on Cummings in the third innings and made a base hit, and by a wide throw of Hicks' he reached second. Cuthbert's hit sending him to third. Cuthy, however, being well thrown out by Start, Ferguson declared Mack out at third base and but one player out, and again did the Athletics feel confident of offsetting the Mutual lead, and McBride went in to do it, and struck a hot liner to Fulmer, who, however, held the ball beautifully, and Mack had to return to 3d base. Pearce hit to Hatfield for a double play, thereby ending the innings for another blank. On the Mutual side, though Hatfield made a base hit, the other batsmen gave easy chances for outs, and the result was a blank.

The next three innings yielded the Athletics and the Mutuals either side, the batsmen retiring in almost one, two, three order, the pitching being too effective, while the fielding was right up to the mark on both sides, the Mutuals, however, having the advantage behind the bat. To say that the Athletics were astonished would but be to half describe their feelings. Not to score in the first four innings was a surprise, but to close their sixth innings without a run was something unprecedented. The Mutuals, on the other hand, were indifferent to the whitewashing process so long as they could retain their lead by preventing their opponents from scoring. As for the betting men, "their sufferings were injiserable." At least that portion who had bought pools on the Athletics at such ridiculous odds, while those on the other side who had taken "the field," were proportionately exuberant.

The seventh innings was commenced by the Athletics with the hope of scoring a run, but again they were retired in order. Now it was that the Mutuals' feeling escape from defeat pretty sure, went in with more confidence at the bat, and Hicks leading off with a safe hit to centre was followed by Boyd, Treacy and Anson, either with safe hits, the result being two earned runs. This left the score at the close of the seventh innings at 4 to 0. The Athletics went in again to save defeat, if possible, but again were whitewashed. On the other hand, they bonished their opponents' score to one run, well earned, by two fine hits by Eccleton and Hicks.

McGeary led off in the ninth innings, and having got his game on a base on balls, in the shuffling, he tried it again in this, but failed, as the ball went hot to Fulman and thence to Start in good time. McGee then put a high one to left field, which McMullen got under in good style—two outs and no man on base. Cuthbert now came to the scratch, and waiting for a good ball, hit hot to Boyd, and as he threw low to Start, and Joe failed to handle it in time, Cuthbert had a life given him and the Athletics' shortstop batter, McBride now came to the rescue, and as Dick handled the bat the game was declared won by the Mutuals, interest by all on the grounds. It was one of those moments of suspense and a critical period in a contest when a lucky hit or a base on balls would make all the difference between success and defeat, and the Athletics deserve credit for the way they took their signal defeat.

AMATEUR vs. CONFIDENCE.

The Confidence club, of New Rochelle, N. Y., visited Pleasantville on July 13th, to play a match with the Amateur Club of that place. The former were the stronger and in all record the latter away from them badly. At the ending of the sixth innings, J. Van Wart, of the Amateurs, while running to third, unfortunately slipped, and it is supposed that his knee pan was broken.

SHORT STOPS.—At New Orleans, La., on July 7th, the Lone Stars worried a picked nine by a score of 13 to 2. On the same day the Natural defeated the Washingtons, 10 to 0, and the Nonpariels were vanquished by the Morse Brigade, score 27 to 12. The Forrest Citys and the Floridas had a bout, the latter coming out best; score, 35 to 20. The Capitols beated the Bellies to the tune of 16 to 15. The Confidence Club, of New Rochelle, N. Y., having re-organized for the season of 1872, are anxious to play all the junior clubs residing in Westchester county for the junior championship of that county, and the silver ball, which they now hold. They would like to hear from all of the junior clubs of the city. The Confidence can be heard from by addressing G. L. R. Livingston, secretary, New Rochelle, New York.....The Rochester (New York,) Club, named Ulitis, on July Fourth, and played a game with the Utica, whom they defeated by a score of 15 to 8. On the next day they proceeded to Ilion, and there they were scooped in by the Clippers, who counted 13 to 6. They then returned to Utica and played the Utica boys again, winning this time by a score of 23 to 10.....The Osceolas beat the Greenmountain club, at Baltimore, Md., on July 4th; score, 13 to 3. On Wednesday, the 10th inst., the Silver Star Club, of New York, will start for Philadelphia, Pa., to play the Athletic Club. On Thursday, the 25th, they play either the Eureka or G. M. Roth nine, and on Friday, 26th, the Olympic Club. The latter having a three days' stay there, and no doubt the Silvers will have an enjoyable time.....The second game of the championship series between the Island Citys and S. S. Lees, of Galveston, Texas, was played on July 7th, and was won by the Citys, score of 37 to 31. The first game resulted in favor of the Lees by 31 to 23.

THE R. E. LEE CLUB, of New Orleans, La., played the Empires, of St. Louis, Mo., on the 14th inst., and were beaten by a score of 16 to 6.

QUOITING.

QUOIT MATCH IN NEW JERSEY.—Sometime ago a challenge was thrown out by the host of the Friendship House, Newark, N. J., for Dutton by name, offering to match himself and others to play quoits for suppers, etc., against Joe Carless and his merry men, of Paterson. The offer was promptly accepted by the boniface of the "Old House at Home," who, however, requested that an alteration be made in the time mentioned. To this the Newarkian was agreeable, and accordingly a match was made which is to be consummated at the Passaic Falls, on which day it was postponed on account of rough water. The scene of the race, Annapolis basin, or Digby basin, as it is more familiarly known, a splendid sheet of water for rowing or sailing boats, provided there is not very little or no wind at all; but it is not well adapted to such races under any other circumstances. It is about eight miles long, east and west, or four miles and a half in a straight line north, or from the head of the basin, where he heard of what was being done, such a course being new this side the Atlantic. Fulton and some of his friends were, however, invited to be present at the start of the match race, and the principals, judges, referee and friends of the carmen, etc., were duly feasted. Brief speeches were made by those who have shamefully and, as the sequel proved, unjustly slandered Fulton, and the subscription, he had collected from that gentleman's friends a purse of $752, which he desired Mr. Fulton to accept as an offering of good will, friendship, and confidence. Mr. Fulton accepted the gift, stating that he appreciated the spirit which prompted it. A gift of this kind was a new thing among Canadian oarsmen, and for the reasons given for the offering he could not have accepted it. The remarks of Mr. Fulton caused a general feeling of disappointment in Digby, where Fulton was the favorite. He was presented with several bouquets when he left the house. Subscriptions were started on the place offered to give $500 towards another match for Fulton if a suitable boat was procured for him, and there are none of his friends who do not believe that he was the worst boated man ever put into so important a race. Fulton has won the match fairly and honorably, and how holds the position of champion of the maritime provinces.

BOAT RACE AT DIGBY, N. S.

A four-oared race came off at Digby, N. S., on July 11th, between crews representing Halifax, Digby, and St. John, N. B., said crews being as follows:—No. 1, Hutton crew, of Halifax, N. S.—Arthur Marvin (bow), Wm. Ross, John Hutton, Robt. Foley (stroke). No. 2, St. John Rowing Club—Thos. Clifford (bow), H. Ellis, J. S. Kaye, W. E. Madison (stroke). No. 3, Digby Rowing Club—W. S. Gilpin (bow), Fred. Dakin, John Brooks, Henry Dakin (stroke). At the word, which was given at 11.32 A. M., the boats got away in a splendid line, the Halifax crew, after a striking at about 44 to the minute, while the Halifax crew, after an ugly splash or two, went off at about 39 or 40, their narrow and heavy boat showing that she would soon put them—though a good crew—out of the race. All the public interest now centered in the St. John and Digby boats, for both went off at a fine pace, and at the end of the first four hundred yards the former had drawn ahead. The crews continued the quick stroke for about a mile, each time the St. John boat showed a length in advance, when the Digby boat made for the smooth water inside, and, while a shout went up from the great crowd on Digby wharf, a counter shout was given by the Johnsers on the shore as the bow of the Digby boys, steering a splendid course for the turning boat, now a mile away. The St. John stroke grew slower and for the next half mile was about thirty yards ahead of the Digby crew

IN A DREAM.

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER.

He beckons with fleshless finger—
She trembles with wild affright,
While out from his eyeless sockets
There flashes a weird-like light.

"Come," cries the bony spectre,
"To my home, my bride, with me,"
And the trembling, tearful maid replies—
"Lead on—I follow thee!"

She moves from her couch like one that walks
In a wild and troubled dream—
Her face as white as that of a corpse,
And shrill and loud her scream.

But, with a fierce, sardonic laugh,
He takes her by the hand,
And they pass from the maiden's chamber
And out in the hallway stand.

He waves over his glittering cops,
In his hand a golden cup—
She pitched headlong down in the staircase,
And that rather wakes her up!

"GOOD RESOLUTIONS."

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER

BY E. MURRAY DAY.

Do not mistake the significance of our title, good reader. This is not to be a homily. It is only a leaf from a biography, and "Good Resolutions," in this connection, is but a pseudonym.

The actor is your true cosmopolite. He may, during an engagement in a regular theatre, through the regular fall and winter season, fix his abode in one locality for a few months, but with the coming of the "heated term" and the closing of the house for the summer vacation, or in default of a "regular engagement, he flits to the rural districts, and wanders, an art nomad, through the country towns and villages, a pioneer of the drama in fields yet untamed to art. And in these wanderings—so pleasant to the true Bohemian—he often encounters singular and original characters, as well as diverse experiences:—

"From grave to gay, from lively to severe."

While bridging over the summer vacation once, by travelling through the small towns of Ohio, our party halted at Youngstown, in the Mahoming Valley. While there, there appeared to us one day a youth of some fourteen years, of Irish extraction, oblique of vision, bare of foot, seedy of attire, and of a grimness that forbade any approach of recent familiarity with soap. This youth applied to our manager for a "job," and the kind hearted E., whom we all regarded with a filial affection, and who was never known to turn away indifferent to the needs of a fellow-creature, took the strange waif into his employ, and assigned him to service as a boy-of-all-work. So, dignified with the brevet title of "property boy," he became, for a time, a useful addition to our force.

What his name was we do not recollect. We are not certain that we ever heard his real patronymic, but have a vague idea that it was prefixed by an "O'" or a "Mc," indicating his descent from some ancient Celtic house. Among us he was known only as "Good Resolutions"—an appellation bestowed upon him in a happy moment of inspiration by one of our party, suggested by the waif's expressed determination while pleading for employment, to turn over a new leaf, work industriously, and earn his living—course, which it was evident, had not heretofore been his usual habit.

He had wandered from Pittsburgh, and by some chance drifted into the pleasant Ohio valley before mentioned—driven from his urban home and practically orphaned by some municipal authority, which, for habitual drunkenness and chronic worthlessness, culminating in a fight contract all marital resemblance and propriety, had consigned his parents to the workhouse.

With the proverbial sharpness of the street Arab, developed by rude experience among the slums of the Iron City, he soon managed to inveigle the less cunning urchins of the villages he visited into performing a large share of his labors for him—the juvenile bucolic mind taking great pleasure in "assisting" in any capacity about a "show," recognizing, without having read Shakespeare, that "the labor we delight in physics pain"—and became a sort of self-constituted overseer of some half-dozen of these in the distributing of bills, collecting and returning "properties," and conveying back and forth, between the hotels and halls, the baskets of costumes belonging to the company.

Under the regenerating influences of honest occupation, his responsibilities and undeniable usefulness, he managed for some time to conduct himself without reproach—if we overlook an intemperate use of tobacco, with which his juvenile chops were always distended, and an unnecessary emphasis and piquancy of speech, acquired, no doubt, at a tender age, and among associations which were his misfortune rather than his fault, and he might have continued in his new course until he developed into something worthier, had not the envious fates prepared for him a trap, into which he fell (literally, as well as figuratively) to his ruin.

In the course of our journeyings we reached the pleasant village of Ravenna. The hall which did duty for our theatre was one of the most unprepossessing, not to say shabby, it had been our misfortune to encounter. It was low of ceiling, dingy, ill ventilated, seated with rude, heavy wooden forms, like a country school house of some remote section and period, and in the warm summer evenings was oftilling an oven, and redolent of kerosene. The stage and its fixtures coincided with the rest of the apartment. It was divided from the auditorium gloomy, funereal appearance, not in harmonious accordance with its use, and the drops, wings, rollers, ropes and fixtures generally were all of amateurish inefficiency.

Upon the fateful night when "Good Resolutions" career took its sudden and disastrous downward turn, we were endeavoring, as best we might under the discouraging surroundings, to represent Shakespeare's "Othello." On the left side of the curtain, near the front edge of the stage, and almost against the first masking of cambric aforesaid which veiled the "behind the scenes" portion of the stage, technically known as "the wings" from the audience, had been deposited a champagne basket containing certain "properties" required in the performance. "Good Resolutions" had been entrusted with the duty of lowering the curtain under the direction of the prompter, and while waiting to perform that service was tempted, in a thoughtless moment, to take a swig upon the champagne basket.

The third act of the play was progressing, and that scene was on foot where Iago, with subtle devilishness, provokes the Moor's jealousy and revenge. Iago was in the midst of the passage commencing—

"Good name in man or woman, dear my lord,
Is the immediate jewel of their souls," etc.,

When a slight crash, a muffled fall, a suppressed cry of mingled surprise and pain, followed by a long continued roar of laughter from the audience, disconcerted the actors, who soon became aware that, by some mishap, a farce had been interpolated into the tragedy.

"Good Resolutions," in an unhappy moment, forgetting there was only a thin and weak cambric partition back of him, and not a solid wall, had leaned against it, and in an instant turned an involuntary back somersault from the stage into the auditorium, carrying with him the entire masking on that side of the curtain, together with the basket he had been sitting on and its contents.

The prompter, dressed for the part of "Ludovico," holding in one hand the prompt book, and in the other a tea-bell with which to "ring down" the curtain, being thus discovered to the audience, stood "not upon the order" of his going, but fled precipitately from the only door leading to the friendly seclusion of the dressing rooms, through which he struggled with certain others of the company, all endeavoring at the same moment to use this sole escape from the ludicrousness of the situation. "Good Resolutions," extricating himself from the ruin he had wrought, beat an ignominious retreat by crawling under the stage, whose delusive front was valorously defended by "Desdemona" while "Othello" and "Iago" finished their scene as though nothing had happened, and by their coolness saved the play from the absurd collapse that for a few moments impended over it.

This was the turning point of "Good Resolutions'" career as attache of a dramatic company. The blame of the catastrophe, its ludicrous nature, and the derision, laughter and sarcastic allusions to this, his first public appearance, overwhelmed him, and, we grieve to say, appeared to crush those better aspirations which, on his advent among us, had suggested his soubriquet. He went rapidly from one fault to another, developing all the inherent viciousness that had for a time lain dormant in his nature, and at last, in accordance, no doubt, with his instincts and antecedent habits, suddenly deserted us, in company with certain small portables and "properties" to which he had become attached, and which his weak moral nature could not endure to leave behind. Perhaps he regarded them as a just compensation for the ignominy and ridicule he had so unfortunately incurred, and which had blasted, almost in their inception, all his "Good Resolutions."

Yours, quite shleeby, UNCLE SCHNEIDER.

BOYISH MISERY.

SPEAKIN' AND RECITATION DAY.

What a stillness prevailed in the old school room when the "master" announced before dismissing school that "on next Friday afternoon there will be no recitations, but after hearing the reading lessons every young lady will read an original composition, and every young man will commit a piece to memory, of poetry or prose, which he will speak from his stand, and those who fail to do either will be punished."

How the perspiration started on the brows of the timid ones as the solemn speech was made. Even the boy who had put his wittens on under the desk, and placed one foot out in the aisle, ready to "git" at the words "school is dismissed," pulled the wittens off, and began searching for a book to take home "to learn something out of," and whispered profanity, such as "darn it," "confound the luck," came up from behind the desks—and all felt as if there was to be an eclipse and no glass had been smoked, except the one smart chap who had "rather speak than not," and the girls who had big sisters at boarding schools, whose previous literary efforts at home afforded rare chances for plagiarism, which by a little help would deceive the teacher.

At last the anxiously awaited day arrives, the forenoon is passed in the usual manner, but at noon there is a decided change made in the appearance of the scholars and school room. The "big girls" are "dressed up" for the occasion. Their gowns are of finer texture than those worn during the week; some are adorned with their mother's "breast pin" and a pair of "prize" ear-rings; white stockings take the place of the "library line" or black ones, which were not look so well on the platform (for there are no dresses en train in those days;) nearly all wore "beau catchers" plastered on the side of their foreheads, and charcoal from the fireplace had been nsed as a dentifrice during the intermission between fore and afternoon.

The little bare-footed girls appeared in bright, copper-toed shoes and taps, embroidered pantalettes of the sunbeam style, and the boys' hair was also an attempt at improved toilette; boots had been greased, paper collars turned, and a portion of their "Sunday-go-to-meetin' clothes" donned for the occasion. Shocky heads of hair had been combed into partial subjection, and the boy with chapped hands had soaked his hands in bran and water until portions of the original cuticle were visible. The "doctor's son" exhaled a powerful aroma, all his father's flavoring essences, and the "tavern keeper's" boy had pointed himself with Jamaica, as a substitute for bay rum. The "master," to maintain a dignity equal to the occasion, had also exchanged his every day coat for a "swing-tail" of fabulous length and shiny in spots as a duck's wing. The bell rings—reading lessons are heard, books put away, the speaking platform cleared for work, and the show opens.

"Samuel Snubnose J" calls the teacher—and "Samuel," with a parting glance at his books, stumbles along towards the stand, where he becomes the target of a hundred eyes, and his face the color of a turkey gobler's wattles. A bow, such as he would have made if a brick had struck him at the instant on the back of the head, and he speaks:—

The curfew tolls the knell of parting day
The lowing (pause) herds wind slowly o'er the lea
The—the (prompter) "plowman" (applause leaves the weary way
And plods the dark to worldness and to me.

Save from the yonder ivy mantled tower
The moping moou doth to the owl complain (snickering)
Save (te he he he) where the beetle wheels his best right hower
And drowsy tinklings lull her distant reign.

The teacher raps on the desk and says:—"Samuel, no levity," and Samuel, who has forgotten pretty much all his "elegy," concludes as follows:—

Here rests his (ha-ha) head (snort) upon the lap of yearth
A youth to (prolonged snicker) unknown.

Melancholy marked him at his—birth,
And science frowned on his early her own.

Sam goes to his seat and holds his nose to keep from laughing out loud, while, at a nod from the master, "Luform, and, after "kartseying," proceeds to read in an inaudible voice something about "Be kind to thy father." The teacher says, "Louder," and we catch a few words. "Your father loves you, and has been at a great deal of expense a-bringing you up, so you should obey him and not—," here ensues a jumble of sounds which no one can interpret, which cease, and after folding the composition, "Lucinda" lays it on the teacher's table for inspection, "kartseys," and goes to her seat. "George Francis Sprain," says the teacher, and a spruce looking chap, whose hair is goose oiled into curliness, steps boldly to the front.

George likes this business—he is going to make a lawyer —and in a shrill voice he commences:—"Not many generations ago, where now are encircled by all that embellished civilized life, the wild fox nodded in the wind, and the thistle dug his hole unscared"—and so he goes on, transposing a sentence occasionally, but mainly right, and with a firm voice to the end. We have seen George since he arrived at man's estate; he now stands in the police courts and defends "drunks" for fifty cents a case, win or lose, and has acquired such a reputation that a judge always comes down harder on his clients than on any others.

Miss Elizabeth Brandreth steps forward, and in a Susan B. Anthony style reads a hilainin description of country life—how "in the spring, when meadow larks are warbling, and geese squawking, she loves to go out into the fields and cull butter-cups and see the little lambkins gamboling on the green grassy banks (green faro banks, her brother said she meant), and then come back to school again since more and more to help her mother stuff sausages, for if we are not kind to our parents the "sassenger meat will spile," and really we have forgotten the rest of Elizabeth's composition.

Then "Charles Bashful" starts for the stand, accelerated in his motion by a pin-thrust, as he left the seat. He bows, and seeing a boy making faces, commences to snicker, until the teacher comes up by his side and raps his head with the ferule—this causes more mirth, then more raps, until he forgets his piece and is locked up in the wood-box in disgrace.

The minister's son, "Melville Winterblossom," is then called to show the scholars how a good boy should speak. Melville looks as solemn as a vinegar jug, his "piece" has been selected by his parents, principally for its moral tone; he says:—

"I do most earnestly wish that I could induce all youthful individuals to divest religion of its gloomy and repulsive associations; but, my Lords, I ask no respite from death; I am ready to die for my country, and, sink or swim, revive and perish, I am for the Union, one and inseparable. My Lords, were I an American as I am an Englishman"—here the teacher, who has been trying to find the original of the orator's remarks, stops the medley, and Melville takes his seat. He had been crammed with so many pieces, that he had been able to distinguish between them, and thus defeated his parents' aims. But why continue this subject? The good little girl recited "Mary's Lamb" very nicely, and the "good little boy" spoke his anti-tobacco piece as follows:—

"I'll never chew tobacco—no
Said little Robert Read;
I'll neither put it in my mouth,
It is a filthy weed."

By the way, we saw this good boy a few days ago; he now chews plug tobacco like a horse, and smokes a clay pipe night and day. But it would be such a consolation to us to know what has become of the rest of that trio of district school orators, who "spoke their pieces" nearly a score of years ago.

ORIGIN OF POPULAR TUNES.—When and how tunes become popular is a somewat curious theme for reflection. We wake up some fine morning and hear almost everybody whistling a melody we have never heard before. We wonder whence it has come, and think how pretty it is, and while we are pondering on the subject we find ourselves taking up the strain and adding our mite towards increasing its circulation. Before the day is over the streets resemble groves of whistling and warbling to the shrill pipings of unfeathered songsters. In a week what had been a new thing of beauty, promising to be a joy forever, becomes an intolerable bore, and we wonder how we could have ever seen anything to admire in the dreary, commonplace thing. At length it ceases as suddenly as it began, and Earth knows it no more. Now the mystery is, who began to whistle it first? It must have had a beginning, and yet it comes upon us so suddenly from a thousand lips at once, and appears in full bloom without having budded. But this, though strange enough, is less strange than the suddenness with which it ceases to be heard. Who is the last man who whistles a popular melody? The same mystery enshrouds him as attaches to dead donkeys, the which, it is popularly believed, have never been seen by man. And yet their must exist such a being. But when he, too, has deserted the neglected air, it breaks forth again in a new form, and acquires a fresh lease of life through the agency of the barrel organ, and is listened to with a pleasure akin to that which hailed its first appearance; and through this agency it long remains a welcome friend.

SAGACITY OF THE HORSE.—One of the most remarkable instances of equine sagacity is reported from Whitby, Canada. A young gentleman named Keene has been for some time a resident near Malton, and from Mr. Rutter, of Ressle Farm, he bought a hunting mare, which, on leaving Malton, he recently took with him to Whitby One day the mare was missing from the field, and a search was instituted. Mr. Keene and his groom going about ten miles on the Guisborough Moors, and then to Sleights, where they heard the mare had crossed the railway the previous morning. At this point the trial was easy. The mare had taken the high road homewards, and at Saltersgate six men tried to stop her, without avail. At Pickering she jumped a load of sticks and the railway gates, and then found herself in her old hunting country, making across Rydale for "home." In so doing she would have to cross two rivers and a railway. Mr. Keene found her at home on the following night, with one shoe thrown and rather lame, but otherwise no worse for her cross-country gallop of nearly sixty miles, done in one day; for her previous owner found her on the night of the day she fled standing at the gate of the field where she had grazed for two previous years.

TATTLING.—Never repeat a story unless you are certain it is correct, and not even then unless something is to be gained, either of interest to yourself, or for the good of the person concerned. Tattling is a mean and wicked practice, and he who indulges in it grows more fond of it in proportion as he is successful.

AFTER THE FUNERAL.—A gentleman in Camden recently lost his wife, and a young miss of six, who came to the funeral,, said to his little daughter of about the same age: "Your pa will marry again, won't he?" "Oh, yes!" was the reply, "but not until after the funeral."

"THE POET."

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER,

BY HENRY S. ROBERTS, THE "ARKANSAS TRAVELER."

The poet is born. Like precious gold,
The mine's embedded in the mould.
And yet who hasn't dared aspire
To strike divine Apollo's lyre?
He strikes, and jarring notes awail
His ear, and drives harshest rail.
I first essayed to write a song;
The rhyme was good, but meters wrong.
My next was pastoral in strain—
I sang of shepherds, love and rain.
The next, my master-piece I think,
Was written o'er the torrent's brink.
Then inspiration filled my soul,
I drank my fill at Fosey's bowl.
Thank God! I've never since attempted
Rhyme—hence from its woes exempted.

AN ESCAPE FROM A BOA-CONSTRICTOR.

An immense number of venomous snakes in all parts of India are a vast check to the enjoyment of every person residing there; to the timorous, apprehension and fear attend every step; even within their houses there is danger of meeting with them; and the most courageous and strong-minded cannot help often feeling uneasy at the presence of these reptiles. The largest of these terrible creatures is the boa-constrictor; but it is not considered by the natives the most formidable, because its bite is not venomous, and its great size somewhat diminishes the danger of surprise. Requiring food only at long intervals, the boa-constrictor, like most other serpents, spends the greater part of its life coiled up asleep, or in a state of stupor, in which, if it has recently been gorged with food, it may be overcome with little danger or difficulty, although to attack it in an active state would be madness. But when it becomes hungry, the gigantic reptile assumes an activity strikingly in contrast with the loggish inertness it before exhibited. When properly in wait for prey, it usually attaches itself to the trunk or branches of a tree, in a situation likely to be visited by quadrupeds for the sake of pasture or water. In this posture it swings about as if a branch or pendant of the tree, until some unhappy animal approaches, then suddenly relinquishing its position, it seizes the unsuspecting victim and coils its body spirally around the throat and chest, and after a few ineffectual cries and struggles, the poor entangled animal is suffocated and expires. It is to be remarked that, in producing this effect, the serpent does not merely wreathe itself around the prey, but places fold over fold, as if desirous of adding as much weight as possible to the muscular effort; these folds are then gradually tightened with such immmense force as to crush the principal bones, and thus not only to destroy the animal, but to bring the carcass into a state the most easy for its being swallowed. Their prey generally consists of dogs, goats, deer, and the smaller sorts of game. Bishop Heber considers as quite untrue the stories of their attacking such large animals as the buffalo or the chetah; but men are by no means exempt from their attacks. This is shown by the following anecdote, from the "Oriental Annual" which was written by the Rev. Hobart Caunter:—

A few years before our visit to Calcutta, the captain of a country ship, while passing the Sunderbunds, sent a boat into one of the creeks to obtain some fresh fruits, which are cultivated by the few miserable inhabitants of this inhospitable region. Having reached the shore, the crew moored the boat under a bank, and left one of their party to take care of her. During their absence the lascar who remained in charge of the boat, overcome by heat, lay down under the bank and fell asleep. While he was in this happy state of unconsciousness, an enormous boa-constrictor emerged from the jungle, reached the boat, had already coiled its huge body around the sleeper, and was in the very act of crushing him to death, when his companions fortunately returned at this auspicious moment, and, attacking the monster, severed a portion of its tail, which so disabled it that it no longer retained the power of coiling its body. The enraged reptile was quickly dispatched, and found to measure sixty-two feet and some inches in length. The following narrative of a narrow escape from the jaws of one of those enormous serpents is from a Madras journal of 1846:—

Captain C., of her Majesty's 87th Foot, was one of the most indefatigable sportsmen I ever met with, and the entire of his time that could be spared from regimental duties was passed in the jungles. He was a man of vast personal strength, could undergo any degree of fatigue; in short, possessed an iron constitution. His habits, too, were anything but luxurious; a single attendant carrying a rifle of large bore, a small carpet to sleep on, a limited stock of linen, and a good supply of ammunition, accompanied the sportsman, who pursued his game by day, and at night sought shelter in some village, perfectly careless as to its accommodation in the way of food or lodging. His beverage being moreover the simple element, he never carried with him supplies of any kind, trusting his commissariat aid to Providence and rural hospitality. In this manner Captain C. became well known to the natives of the country in every direction where sport was to be obtained. He was sufficiently acquainted with their language to make himself understood, and the kinkly simplicity of his manner attached them to his person; and many of them have been known to walk miles to give early information of large game, which were his favorite objects of pursuit. Captain C. was quite at home in the Wynand jungle and the Western Ghauts, where he probably brought to bay, single-handed more head of large game, including [illegible] before, or ever will again, in India. When upon one of these excursions, Captain C. happened to be passing the night in a small village in the Wynand jungle, a ryot who had been out very late searching for a stray bullock, came to tell him of a cheetul, or spotted deer which he had watched to his lair. He had also seen a boa, which he said that a huge snake had been seen several times in the neighborhood. He started accordingly after his game at daybreak, accompanied by the villager and a favorite dog, which rarely left his heels unless when ordered. After proceeding about a mile through very dense jungle, and being, as the villager supposed, near the spot where the cheetul had lain down, Captain C. suddenly missed his dog, and hearing a rustling in the bushes about ten yards to his right, where no game was likely to be found at that direction, and saw what he at the first glance took for a tiger, from its color—a mixture of black and yellow —but soon discovered to be an enormous boa-constrictor which had seized his poor Juno, and was at the moment crushing her in its terrible coils. The native who was with him saw what it was, and immediately fled. Captain C. afterwards described the appearance of the reptile, when thus coiled round his dog, as something resembling in parent portion its every muscular motion; and he distinctly heard the bones of the poor animal crack in succession within its terrible embrace. At last the monster raised its head, and fixed two glaring eyes on Captain C., who, in another moment, might perchance have been fascinated by the deadly gleam; but with unerring aim, he placed two balls in its forehead. The effect was not, however, as he expected, fatal; and the snake, turning once more on its prey, let it fall, and came straight at captain C., who took to flight. So thick was the jungle, however, that he found the animal gaining upon him, from the noise it made amongst the bushes, and therefore sought shelter in a tree, reloading his gun with all possible expedition. Whether the reptile followed him by sight or smell, he could not judge; but he was only just prepared for a second discharge, when the boa reached the tree, and instantly twisting itself round it, seemed would soon have him. Fortunately at the next shot he blew out both its eyes with a charge of B B; but, though the snake appeared for a moment stunned, it still continued its efforts to reach him, until by repeated shots it was incapacitated from rising, though not until CaptainC. had completely emptied his powder-flask. Even then he did not venture to descend, as the reptile continued coiled round the tree, occasionally showing by a muscular movement that its powers were not yet wholly extinct. At length, after some hours solitary confinement on his perch, and shouting for aid until he was hoarse, Captain C. had the satisfaction to see a number of villagers arrive, by whom the monstrous animal was soon completely destroyed. Captain C. had no means of accurately measuring its length but by a piece of stick, which the natives said was a cubit long, and he declared that it measured upwards of thirty of these and was much thicker than his own thighs, which would have well become the leathers of any Life Guardsman. The head of the boa was cut off, and sent to the president of Mysore; and its enormous jaws may possibly still be in existence at the Mysore Presidency.

Serio-Comic Results of a Shave.

A citizen of Evansville, Ind., undertook to trim his beard a short time since, and a slip of the scissors spoiled the cut. He trimmed a little more, but it would look lopsided; so he went to the barber's and got shaved for the first time in twelve years. He was very busy, and business detained him in his office until a late hour of the night, so when he went home he found that his family had retired. This was not an unusual occurence; so he silently entered by means of a pass-key, sought his own room and undressed without lighting the gas. He got partly into bed, when his wife astonished him by uttering a loud and prolonged scream. He was very much alarmed for her, and feared she had lost her reason. He implored her to tell him the cause of her fright.

At the sound of his voice she screamed:—"Oh, Edward, come quick and save me!"

"I am here, dear," said he; but she screamed the louder at the words.

He sprang out of bed and had just struck a light, when his brother-in-law, a muscular six footer, rushed into the room and fired a revolver at his head. Luckily it missed, but his fist did not, for in a minute a pale-faced man, with a long white robe, staggered under a blow that doubled the size of his organ of comparison.

"My God!" he exclaimed, "are you all crazy?"

"Bless my heart," exclaimed the muscular brother-in-law, "if it ain't Ned himself! Why, what on earth tempted you to get yourself up in that style?"

"What style?" asked the much abused husband, as he rubbed the growing lumps on his forehead.

"Why, when did you shave?"

It was all clear to him then. His wife had put up her hand in the dark, and meeting the shaved face of a man, took her husband for an intruder. She recognized his voice at first, but the second time he spoke her terror was too great, and she fainted. When the brother now rushed in he saw a thin-faced man with a slightly bald head, in a long white night robe, and in his rage at the supposed outrage, fired at him, missed, and then knocked him down with his fist. Fortunately his voice saved the husband from a second shot. His wife recovered from her faint only to faint again at the sight of her husband's face and the sound of the pistol shot. He finally got to bed again and slept very well until morning, when "the baby," a child of about two years of age, approached the bed, as he had been used to do, and frightened at the sight of a stranger, ran screaming from the room. Tripping on her night dress, the poor child received a severe bump on its little head. Matters were finally straightened up at home, but on the street his friends passed without speaking, and at the bank he was not only refused payment of a draft, but threatened with arrest for signing his own name in endorsing it. Of course a little explanation brought the various affairs all right, but it took so much time to explain, and for the contusion on his forehead to get well, that the aforesaid citizen vows that he will never shave again, as he considers it a habit dangerous to peace and even to life.

A COMICAL TRAGEDY.—There was considerable fun at a recent representation of "Romeo and Juliet" in a little French theatre. Madame Deharme, the Juliet of the occasion, was lying dead on a tomb. It was raining torrents; a drop came through the roof and fell on Juliet's nose; she made a face. Another drop fell on her eyelids; she winked. It was a facial expression not taught by Delsarte. Finally, she took to watching the drops and dodging them. The audience caught the idea, and sympathized with her. "Look out, Mrs. Juliet," said one fellow; "there's a whopper a-comin'—I see it!" "Mind your eye!" said another. "Madame," said a third, rising, "will you accept the use of my umbrella?" Of course the tragedy ended.

BONES AS A PAWNBROKER.

INTERLOCUTOR.—What are you thinking about, Mr. Bones? What is there on your mind this evening?

BONES.—I was jis thinking bout dat business I was in some time ago. I started in de—what you call dat business dat da hab free balls hanging out.

INT.—Oh, you mean the pawnbroker.

BONES.—Yes, I was a pawnbroaker wen I went in de biz, but I was a dead broaker wen I eame out.

INT.—Let us hear of your experience as a pawnbroker.

BONES.—Well, having nothing to do I fout I'd start de broaking business; so I rented a room, got free balls what I found laying around loose in a ten pin alley, and hung em out.

INT.—And what success did you have?

BONES.—I'll tell you. De fust man dat cum in had a big paper bundel under his arm; he looked all around, den begin to open de bundel, den he took all around agin.

INT.—He was suspicious, I suspect.

BONES.—Spec he was. At las he open de bundel and took out a ole hammer, an wanted two dollars on it.

INT.—And what did you do about it then?

BONES.—Hammered him over de head wid a club. De next one dat come in was a Dutchman, and a big hunk of Limburger cheese in his hand. He wanted to pawn it.

INT.—What did you tell him?

BONES.—Told him to "cheese it," an go. And de next man had a push cart.

INT.—A push cart! What did he want to do with that?

BONES.—Wanted to pawn it; it was all broke, and he wanted nuf on it to get a new one.

INT.—What did you do with him?

BONES.—Took him up on de roof, put him in de cart an pushed him off. De nex man had de leg ob a stove!

INT.—A leg of a stove! What did he want to do with that?

BONES.—Wanted to pawn his leg of a stove? What did you do with him.

BONES.—Stove in his plug hat wid it. De nex man dat come in was a woonin.

INT.—A lady, sir. And what did she want?

BONES.—She wanted to pawn a chaw of tobacer, and I was goin to chaw off her ear, but I seen she had a feller outside to back her, and a man wid 14 suits ob old close, an dar wosent haf ob a suit in de hole lot.

INT.—And wat did he want?

BONES.—Wanted to pawn dem, an he wanted nuf on dem 14 ole suits to buy seven new ones.

INT.—What is that? Do I hear right? He wanted enough on the 14 old suits to buy seven suits?

BONES.—Dat's it.

INT.—And what conclusion did you come to in regard to the clothes?

BONES.—I concluded to close up shop, and I did so, an never ben in de biz sence.

INT.—We will now have a new ballad:—

A Passion Song—"Bayd, My Sultana!"

Sayd, my Sultana, my peri, my bouri!
Like gazelle's is thy figure for grace;
Spite of all effort thy voice will allure me,
Even wine's charm can't thy mem'ry erase;
In every bubble that breaks on mine lip
Glisten those eyes that have led me to trouble—
Ere I forget them my will be dim!
Chorus.—Gally, love, gally, then,
Strike thy guitar,
Singing of passion,
Life's guiding star!

Sayd, my Sultana, my syiph and my syren!
Fragrant thy breath as the gardens of Gul;
Shadows of sifland thy fair forms environ,
Thou hast a heart with emotion that's full—
Ev'n as I listen earth fades with its care;
Stars in thy radiant orbs twinkle and glisten,
Panting and trembling I yield to the snare!
Chorus.—Gally, love, gally then, &c.

Of all the girls that wear false curls you're the prettiest in the valley!"

White trash may tell of lovely blondes, blue eyes and tresses golden,
For none of these I care a snap, to such she's not beholden;
My Sally's hair is black as jet, and her eyes a coal black'er,
And her skin, my jealous rivals say, is the color of hard tobacc'er.
Chorus.—But still I sing, "My Sally!" etc. J. H. B.

AN OLD TIME SHOW.

John M. Croley, advertising agent, formerly of Bailey's Show, but now of Howe's London Circus and Menagerie, contributes the following old time announcement to our Varieties. He says:—"In my trip through Maine I came across this bill; the town spoken of is now known as Skowhegan, Me. I had a talk with the old gent, the owner of the inn; he is ninety years old; he recollects the show distinctly, but cannot remember the name of the "main guy." The lot on which they showed is hardly large enough for a side show canvas:—

GRAND CARAVAN,

consisting of the most rich and rare collection of animals ever in exhibition at one time. Will be exhibited at the Inn of Gen. Joseph Locke, in Bloomfield, on

FRIDAY AND SATURDAY, MAY 11TH AND 12TH,

and at the inn of Capt. Wm. Stoddish, in Norridgewock, on MONDAY AND TUESDAY, MAY 14TH AND 15TH, 1827.

FIRST DRAMATIC COMPANY IN WILLIAMSBURGH, L. I.

Below we present a copy of the bill of the first dramatic company that appeared in Williamsburgh, L. I., twenty years ago. Mr. James Pilgrim has kindly favored us with the bill:—

ODEON!

Grand Dramatic Entertainment in Williamsburgh.

Mr. JAMES PILGRIM begs leave to inform the citizens of Williamsburgh and vicinity, that he has engaged the new and handsome Lecture Room of the Odeon, corner of South Fourth and Fifth streets, and that he will have the honor to introduce the first Dramatic Company in Williamsburgh on MONDAY EVENING, FEBRUARY 13TH, 1832.

The room in point of elegance and comfort, is unsurpassed, being well heated, lighted and ventilated, and capable of seating 900 persons.

The COMPANY has been carefully and judiciously selected from the principal New York theatres, and comprises many well known and talented artists. In asking the support of the Williamsburgh public, Mr. Pilgrim assures them that no pains or expense will be spared to deserve it.

The performance will commence with Bulwer's beautiful play in five acts, entitled the MANHATTAN VS. ST. GEORGE.—The second elevens of these cricket clubs will play a match on their ground, foot of Eighth street, Hoboken, N. J., on Wednesday and Thursday afternoons, 17th and 18th inst. Game to commence at 3 P. M. each day. They have also arranged a first eleven one-day game for Wednesday, the 24th inst., to commence at 11 A. M. Should it rain on Wednesday, the game will come off on Thursday.

BASE BALL.

TOURNAMENT AT CALIFORNIA, PA.

Pursuant to announcement and special invitation, quite a number of the most prominent base ball clubs of Fayette, Greene, Washington and Westmoreland counties, Pa., met at California, Washington Co., on the "glorious fourth," to enjoy a grand tournament in a contest for a belt, and also the championship of the four counties represented. The day was beautiful and an immense concourse of people gathered to witness the sport. The first game played was between the O. K. Club, of Pike Run, and the Athletics, of Victory. The play was vigorous and exciting. The scores stood as follows:—O. K., 12; Athletics, 18. The next game in the afternoon was between the Fearless, of Monongahela city, and the Red Stockings, of Brownsville, two of the crack clubs of the Monongahela valley, and of course the interest manifested by the spectators was intense. This was the great test game for the belt. The Red Stockings carried off the laurels. The game for the championship was to be decided on the 5th, between the Red Stockings and the Athletics, on the same ground, at 2 o'clock P. M. The Red Stockings appeared at the time and place appointed; the men took their places; the game was called at 2½ o'clock, and the Athletics not appearing, the game was declared in favor of the former—9 to 0. As the Red Stockings are declared Champions of the Tournament, they are prepared to play all clubs for the belt and the championship of the four counties embraced, the playing to be on their own chosen ground, best two in three. The following is the score of the principal game:—

ATHLETIC vs. OLYMPIC.

The Olympics, of Baltimore, visited Philadelphia on the 10th inst., for the purpose of playing their first game with the Athletics, of that city. The Olympics presented a strong nine, including two of their defunct namesakes of Washington, Williams and Goldsmith. The weather was quite warm at the outset of playing, but impending clouds threatening a thunder shower materially cooled the atmosphere, and made playing a more pleasant operation. The Athletics, by excellent batting, ran up ten runs in the first two innings, and afterwards played carelessly at the bat, only earning three more in the last seven, although the loose play of their opponents in the fifth and ninth gave them ten more runs. An opportunity lost for an easy double play by McGeary, and bad misses by McBride and Meyerle in the second, allowed the Olympics to score five runs, Hooper scoring a clean home run in that inning. The Olympics failed to add another run until the last innings, when they duplicated their score by some excellent batting, Popplein bringing home two men, and making his third base by a fine hit. The game was an uninteresting one, and presented but few features of interest, save what the following score will show:—

TROY vs. ECKFORD.

The game played by the Troy nine with the Eckfords on July 9th, on the Union grounds, L. I., was, as a general thing, as good a display of batting and fielding against a strong nine as the Troys have made this season in Brooklyn. But seven errors were made in the field, and Force's [illegible] Bellan also distinguished themselves at the bat, Wood bearing off the palm in the field. The Eckfords presented the strongest nine and played their best game, but thirteen fielding errors marking their play, the fewest of any game they have played this season. Jas. Snyder played splendidly in his position, the catching of Bestick was excellent, and O'Rourke's pitching the best seen in an Eckford nine this year. The game was admirably umpired in an hour and twenty minutes, the time of a game being a fair criterion of the umpiring, as a general thing. The score below gives the details:—

Troy.	R.	1s.	P.O.	A.	Eckford.	R.	1s.	P.O.	A.

Runs earned—Troy, 3; Eckford, 1. First base by errors—Troy, 8 times; Eckford, 4 times. Total fielding errors—Troy, 7; Eckford, 13. Umpire—Mr. Burdock, Atlantic Club. Time of game—One hour and twenty minutes.

If the Eckfords can get this team into working trim they will soon offset their defeats with noteworthy displays.

TROY vs. MUTUAL.

These clubs, having played out their regular series together, began an "exhibition" series on July 10th, on the Union ground, L. I., in the presence of about 300 people, but little interest being taken therein. Rain interrupted the game and ended it in the eighth innings, with the appended result:—

THE GAME IN JULY.—This month will be a quiet one in professional circles. The Mutual and Troy nines have closed their series; also the Baltimoreans and Clevelanders; and as the Bostons have gone in for recruiting their strength for the fall campaign, the other clubs prefer doing likewise until August, when the contests will be renewed with vigor. The patronage has proved to be very slow since the Fourth, and nothing will be done until the last of July. During the interim some of the clubs will take a trip to Canada, where the game flourishes now.

DRAMATIC vs. PERRY.

These two clubs played their third game on July 12th, at Bergen, N. J., the Dramatic being once more victorious, as the appended score exhibits:—

AQUATICS.

THE COMING OCEAN REGATTA.

The following circular has been issued by the regatta committee of the New York Yacht Club concerning the approaching ocean race for the Challenge Cup, the competition for which is open to yachts of all nations:—

NEW YOR, July 9th, 1872.

As the by-laws of the club require that the fourth regular meeting shall take place on the 18th inst., the regatta committee have, at the suggestion of the commodore, decided to postpone the race to Thursday, the 25th inst.

The race is open to yachts of all nations, and is to be sailed for according to the rules of the New York Yacht Club, but without time allowance.

Entries must be made at the office of the secretary, 22 Broad street, on or before 12 o'clock M. on Wednesday, the 24th inst.

Competing yachts will rendezvous at the lightship not later than 1 P. M. on the 25th inst.

The course will be from Sandy Hook lightship to and around the lightship off Newport (Brenton's reef), and back to the starting point, passing outside of Long Island. Yachts may go either side of Block island they may prefer.

The Cup will be awarded subject to the following conditions, as expressed in the letter of the donor:—

First—It is to be held by the winner for thirty days after the race, without liability to challenge.

Second—Upon the expiration of that period the winner must accept any challenge and be prepared to sail a race over the same course within fifteen days from the receipt of such challenge, or forfeit the cup to the challenger; but should any yacht succeed in holding the cup in two consecutive races during one season, it will not again be liable to challenge until the commencement of the yachting season of the following year.

Third—The yachting season in American waters, in reference to this cup, is understood to be from the third Thursday in June until the third Thursday in October in each year.

Fourth—Should a yacht holding this cup be sold out of the New York Yacht Club the cup shall not go with her, but shall be returned to the club, to be again sailed for; and if the cup should be held by a foreign yacht, and she should be sold out of the club to which she belongs, the cup shall not be sold with her, but shall be returned to the New York Yacht Club, to be sailed for again as above provided.

Fifth—In the event of the cup being held at the close of a season by a foreign yacht, the owner thereof will be liable to challenge during the season of the next year for an ocean race, over a course from the Needles, Isle of Wight, to and around the stakeboat off the harbor of Cherbourg, and return.

C. L. BENSON,
W. B. BEND,
WILLIAM KEBBS,
} Regatta Committee.

C. A. MINTON, Secretary.

NOTE.—In order that the winner of the challenge cup may possess a durable memento of the race, the commodore (in the event of five yachts starting), further offers a prize cup of the value of $500, to be presented to and held by the winner as his own personal property.

DEATH OF A COURAGEOUS SWIMMER.—Mr. Albert Kintzing Post, well known among the best classes of society in this city, had taken up his residence for the summer, with his wife, a daughter of Gen. de Trobriand, and with their children, at Westhampton, L. I., a quiet seaside town. He was an accomplished swimmer, and upon more than one occasion had saved the lives of less experienced bathers at no slight peril of his own. On the morning of the 5th inst., as he was going into the surf for his morning bath, a boy of some ten years, the child of a guest in the same house, prepared to accompany him. The attendants remonstrated, pointing out that the surf, always strong at this place, was made more than usually dangerous by the state of the tides. Mr. Post, finding the boy bent on bathing, kindly offered to take charge of him, and the two went into the water. In a very few moments the boy was mastered by the under-tow, and set up a cry of terror. Mr. Post instantly swam to his rescue, and reached him only to share his fate. Help was at hand, and the swimmers were drawn out of the water under the very eyes of Mrs. Post. But both had ceased to breathe. Mr. Post had been overpowered, not by the force of the waves, but by the earnestness and energy with which he had turned to save the imperilled child. It was found that he had been struck by apoplexy, the result of a too sharp moral and physical effort. In the bloom of his vigorous manhood (he was but thirty years of age), of a cultivated mind, and with tastes developed both by serious study and by extensive travel, a happy husband and a devoted father, Mr. Post was in all respects a gentleman.

ROWING ON CRYSTAL LAKE.—The Crystal Lake, N. Y., Boat Club races, which were postponed on account of the rain, July 4th, took place on Saturday, the 6th inst., and were witnessed by a large number of spectators. The following is a summary of the races:—

C. L. B. C. REGATTA, CRYSTAL LAKE COURSE, MELROSE, N. Y., July 6th.—Four-oared lapstreaks, rowed on the gunwale; distance, one mile; prize, four silver cups.

Crew No. 1.—S. Buttrick (stroke), C. C. Barry, Hobart Clark, W. D. Senat (bow). Colors, blue; time, 8m. 20¾s.

Crew No. 2.—C. B. Hill (stroke), J. W. Sanders, L. S. Leighton, G. [illegible] Colors, red; time, 8m. 21s.

D. C. Norcross (bow). Colors, orange; time, 8m. 55¾s.

Crew No. 3.—[illegible] H. Sawyer (stroke), [illegible] W. Sawyer, C. H. Sawyer (bow). Colors, white; time not taken.

The next race, distance 3 miles, was in wash tubs, for which there were five entries, as follows:—D. C. Norcross, G. M. Ray, C. J. Wing, C. Reid and A. Sargent. The prize was a silver goblet, and was carried off by Norcross. The highest interest was manifested by the crowd in attendance, which was larger than any ever seen at any previous boat race in Melrose.

SCULLING AT SARATOGA, N. Y.—A boat race was contested on Saratoga lake, July 10th, between John Morrissey, Jr., and Wm. Hill, for $100 a side, Morrissey rowing in a single scull and Hill in a working boat. The distance was two miles and return. John Finlay was Morrissey's judge, and Geo. Crane acted for Hill. Oscar Avery was chosen referee. At the start Morrissey led about one length, but at the end of the first mile Hill took the lead, and kept it to the stake, which he reached some quarter of a mile in advance of Morrissey. On the return Hill still kept ahead, but losing his course, Morrissey came up rapidly. It was too much for him, however, and he had to slacken his pace. Hill, seeing his mistake, took the right course again and increased his lead to the finish, coming in ahead by about 40 lengths, in 35:27.

LYNN YACHT CLUB.—The regatta of this Massachusetts club, postponed from the 4th, came off on July 6th, and barring some trouble between the boats of the first-class, was a highly enjoyable affair. The Lillie, Capt. Phillips, was the first to come in, and the Eva, Capt. Isagi, second. A protest was entered by one of the boats, it being alleged that there was a violation of the rules in slipping the lines before the signal to start. The prizes were therefore withheld and the judges will decide the matter. The first prize in the second class, $40, was taken by the Expert, Capt. Davidson; and the second prize, $25, by the Georgietta, Capt. Abbott. In the third class the Lizzie, Capt. Taylor, took the first prize, $50; and the Alpha, Capt. Roney, the second prize, $15.

THE BUNKER HILL YACHT CLUB held their annual regatta in Boston harbor, near Long Island, on the 6th inst. There were six first class and three second class entries, and two prizes were offered in each class. In the first class the first prize was a field glass, which was awarded to the Sparkle; the second prize, a set of colors, being given to the Mystery. In the second class, the Unique was given the first prize, a field glass; the Bull Bow being awarded the second prize, a compass. The judges of the race were E. Gifford, George Melvin and Warren Ferrin.

JOE SADLER, champion sculler, is, we learn, making preparations to visit America again this season, as there is no likelihood of any one coming forward on that side of the water to dispute his right to the title, and there's more money to be picked up at regattas here than on the Thames and Tyne. He is having a shell built by Robt. Jewitt, of Dunston, and will, it is understood, put up at Josh Ward's, Cornwall, N. Y., during this stay. He may expect a cordial welcome from the oarsmen of the States and Canadas.

ROWING AT TORONTO.—Wm. Thomson, a gentleman well known in commercial circles, and David McCleary, a member of the press, rowed a scullers' race, for $50 a side, in Toronto bay, on June 29th, the former winning by about half a length .....On the 4th inst. Geo. E. Cooper and Geo. Johnston rowed from Tinning's Wharf to Parkinson's Hotel, for $50 a side, Cooper winning by half a dozen lengths..... A new club has been organised there, of which Henry O'Brien is president.

FIVE TUB RACES afforded amusement to a large number of spectators at Wedge pond, Winchester, Mass., on July 6th. Charles Buxton won the first prize in the first race and Fred. Shepherd the second. In the second contest the winners were Eugene Ayer and Fred. Steele; third, H. A. Hatch and Robert Windsor; fourth (heavy weights), Briggs and Charles Marble; scrub race, George Baker and O. A. Dunce.

THE ATALANTA INTERNATIONAL FOUR have returned to this city from London, England, Van Raden and Handy coming on the City of Antwerp, and Doct. Withers and Smith on the City of Brooklyn. We regret to state that they were not shewn such a reception by their brother oarsmen as their pluck and honest efforts to win entitled them to. They acknowledge themselves fairly beaten.

THE yacht Tidal Wave, Commodore Voorhis, Jr., owner, drifted ashore on Brenton's Reef, off the mouth of the harbor of Newport, R. I., on the 11th inst., and was with difficulty hauled off by the Cuban privateer Pioneer, which had been sent to her assistance by Captain Ritchie, of the revenue cutter Moccasin. Her rudder was broken and she leaked badly, necessitating her going on the ways.

THE POTOMAC REGATTA, about which the oarsmen and press of Washington and Georgetown, D. C., talked so enthusiastically several months since, has been abandoned. We are assured that this is due solely to lack of energy upon the part of the projectors, for the people of the Capital manifested a disposition to subscribe liberally toward the object.

MARK ADDY, the well-known Manchester Eng., sculler, saved a young girl of sixteen, who had fallen into the river Irwell, from drowning, on June 26th. The rescue was accomplished with great difficulty, Addy being much exhausted, and the members of the Manchester Nemesis Rowing Club are endeavoring to obtain the Royal Humane Society's medal for him.

THE SHATEMUC BOAT CLUB, of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., held their annual review and regatta on the Hudson, July 11th. The main event was a single scull race, which was won by Geo. Van Vliet, G. S. Burnap second, John Grubb third, T. R. Roosevelt fourth and John Reynolds fifth. A tub race followed and was won by J. Whitehouse.

A ROWING REGATTA came off on Lake Quanissoitt, Wakefield, Mass., on July 5th, several thousand persons assembling to witness it. The single scull race was won by L. Johnson, and the double scull by W. L. Coon and E. Edgecomb. This is the fourth time Coon has been one of the victorious pair.

MR. COLGATE'S YACHT GRACIE and Mr. Reling's Meta have been matched to sail twenty miles to windward and return, for a $250 cup, on the 23d inst., the start to be from either buoy No. 5, off Sandy Hook or the Lightship, according to the wind, and the race to be governed by the Brooklyn Club rules.

THE REGATTA of the Beverly Yacht Club came off in the harbor off South Boston, on the 6th inst. The Posy, Capt. N. T. Allen, took the prize for the first class, and the Petrel, Capt. W. F. Halsall, for the second class. The Rose, Capt. Arthur Burgess, carried away the medal for the third class.

CAPT. WILL. A. SHORT, of Washington, D. C., and lately a prominent member of the Analostan Boat Club, of that city, stopped in to see us a few days ago, upon his return from the Gilmore Jubilee at the Hub.

AN AMATEUR REGATTA is to come off at Pettaquamscot Cove, Narragansett Heights, on Aug. 3d. Prizes are offered for four-cared and single scull races.

A DOUBLE SCULLE RACE, for a ten spot a side, came off in the harbor of St. John, N. B., on July 8th, between the James Renforth, rowed by John Farren, and Michael McElheany, of that place, and the Scud, pulled by John Harding and Pat Nickerson, of Portland. The latter pair came home in advance and pocketed the shekels.

TIM DONOGHUE, of Newburgh, N. Y., offered to accept the challenge issued by W. F. Edmundston, on behalf of Gil Ward, to John McKeel, provided the race was fixed to come off on July 13th, amount of stakes and distance rowed immaterial. The challenging party thought this too soon, however.

O'LEARY, the unfortunate Worcester oarsman, is not to be squelched, it seems. He is making overtures for a match with Patsey Harrington, of Springfield, who might not inappropriately be styled "the one-armed sculler, for $250 a side, to take place after August 1st.

THE BENNETT CUP will be raced for on the 25th inst., over a course from Sandy Hook to Newport and return, or from the same point to Cape May and return, as may hereafter be agreed upon. The principal schooner yachts of New York and Brooklyn will participate.

JAMES O'NEIL, the skillful amateur of Troy, N. Y., is, it seems, to be allowed to pull over the course alone and claim the title of "champion of America," as nobody has, so far, dared to accept his challenge issued some time ago.

JAMES BOYD, of Waterloo, and W. Williamson, of Cambois, on the one part, and Lewis Lewis and Joseph Rawling, on the other, rowed a double scull race, for £50 a side, on the 15th inst., two miles, on June 22d, the former couple winning by half a length.

HARRY COULTER, of Allegheny, Pa., and Bob Berry, the colored oarsman of Toronto, C. W., are spoken of as principals in a prospective match.

THE BROOKLYN YACHT CLUB decided, at a special meeting held on July 16th, that the annual cruise should commence on the 5th of September, the rendezvous to be Glen Cove.

THE BAYONNE YACHT CLUB'S sixth annual and fifth union regatta will be sailed on July 17th. The anchorage will be off Robin's Reef.

THE TURF.

TROTTING AT FLEETWOOD PARK.
Great Trot for a Purse of Five Thousand Dollars Between American Girl, Goldsmith Maid, Lucy and Henry—American Girl Wins in Three Fast Heats—Time, 2:21¼ 2:19½-3¼ 2:24¼!!

The great contest for the purse of $5,000, offered by the Fleetwood Park Association, conditional on the entrance of Goldsmith Maid, Lucy, American Girl and Henry, mile heats, best three in five, in harness, came off at Fleetwood Park on Tuesday last. Since the above horses, with the exception of American Girl, trotted at Prospect Park on June 27th, when Goldsmith Maid won in three straight heats in the extraordinary fast time of 2:17¼; 2:19; 2:17¾, the interest attached to their meeting at Fleetwood has been deepening; the fact that American Girl would also take part in the contest increasing the excitement. The day proved highly favorable, and the attendance in consequence was the largest ever known within the gates of Fleetwood Park; some 10,000 people being congregated on the grounds. The club house, grand stand and the hills from the head of the home-stretch to the stables were densely crowded and covered with spectators, including a vast number of ladies, while the enclosure in front of the grand stand was lined, a dozen deep, with carriages and equipages of every size and style. The track was also in first rate order for fast time, and everything was favorable for the enjoyment of the occasion.

Precisely at 3½ o'clock P. M., the judges, Messrs. Geo. Alley, Joseph Harker and Shephard Knapp, entered the stand and rang the bell for the horses. American Girl, driven by Ben Mace, was the first to put in an appearance; she looked in magnificent condition and moved with unusual freedom. Henry, driven by John Murphy, also looked and moved well. Lucy, with O. A. Hickok hand ing the ribbons, next showed; she seemed to be in fine order, but it was currently whispered about that she was suffering from sexual disturbances incidental to mares at this season. Goldsmith Maid, driven by her old trainer, Budd Doble, was the last to put in an appearance, and she at once became the centre of observation. She appeared in fine order, and trotted up the stretch in her preliminary exercise with her accustomed fine, free action. Scepter did her winning as the race appear to every one, that in all the pools sold she was excluded, and they were dependent on the second money. The night previous, at Johnson's pool rooms, Lucy had been a great favorite for the second money, and even Henry had a decided call on American Girl, bringing $100 to the latter's $80. But on the course, before the race commenced, the pool betting underwent a complete change, for American Girl became the favorite over both Lucy and Henry, bringing $250 to $220 for Lucy, and $95 for Henry.

First Heat.—After scoring ineffectually several times, the word was given to a fair send off. Henry had the pole, American Girl next, Goldsmith Maid third, and Lucy on the outside. Before rounding the turn both American Girl and Henry left their feet, but caught again immediately. The former showed in front after going around the turn, with Henry close up, Goldsmith Maid, who made a slight skip, third, a length behind Henry, and Lucy as far behind the Maid. Half way down the hill both American Girl and Henry broke, but the former, striking in during the pause of the man's cry, Amer can Girl led Henry half a length; Lucy. On the back stretch the friends of Goldsmith confidently expected her to [illegible] her perfect ease, but [illegible] American Girl kept steadily increasing the gap, and at the half mile pole, passed in 1:08, was two clear lengths in front of Henry, who was half a length before Goldsmith Maid. Ascending the hill on the third quarter the Maid got a little closer to the two leaders, and it seemed for a moment as if she was going to pass them both. But the hill told on her, and American Girl, showing wonderful resolution, again drew clear away, Lucy having taken second place from Henry as the latter made a slight break when half way up the hill. At the three quarter pole American Girl led Lucy half a length, and as each struck their respective home stretch Ben Mace sent the Girl along at a lively gait, Lucy also trotting fast on her wheel. Goldsmith Maid gave Henry the go by at the draw gate, and the latter was at once taken in hand. Hickok made a vigorous effort to force Lucy to overtake American Girl, but failing to do so, was beaten to the string by half a length, Goldsmith Maid being a bad third. Time, 2:21¼, which was the fastest time ever made over the Fleetwood track, the previous fastest heat having been 2:21¾, made by Goldsmith Maid, May 20th, 1870, against American Girl, Lucy and George Palmer.

Second Heat.—The betting showed that Goldsmith Maid was still a hot favorite, notwithstanding she had lost a heat, her pools she sold for $150 against the field's $25. After repeated scorings, a start was effected, with the favorite leading, American Girl and Lucy even, and Henry a length behind. Goldsmith Maid broke immediately after the word was given, and American Girl assumed the lead, with Lucy in second place. Descending the hill to the quarter pole Goldsmith Maid trotted so fast that she passed Lucy and lapped American Girl at that point; time, 34½ seconds. On the Introductory Overture.

MONDAY, July 15th, '72.

The only subjects for proper discussion during the past week were those connected with Stokes, the nomination of Horace Greeley, and the terrible heat. Everything else was tabooed. At the Fleetwood track, where American Girl knocked spots out of Goldsmith Maid, the knowing ones stoutly maintained that it was all owing to the Girl getting the best of the heat. We mingled with the crowd who hurrahed for the Woodpecker of Chappaqua, when the salute was fired in honor of Horry's nomination. "Oh," says one of the newsboys—who is already looking ahead for a position as messenger in the White House—"won't the old man warm 'em, though? Won't he make it red hot ?" We dropped in at "the coolest theatre in the city"—which is shut up now on account of the extreme heat—and there we had a comfortable chat with the backdoorkeeper, as he sat in the shadow of his big straw hat. "Nice day," we ventured to remark. "Call this a nice day when it's as hot as hell?" "How's things inside?" "Gloomy enough—take a look." The interior was gloomy, and no mistake, with scarcely a sound to be heard in that wilderness of canvas and things; it was dark and forbidding. Here, where "myriads" of young girls were wont to display their agility and charms to the gaze of admiring thousands, not a soul was present, not a voice was heard in the deep stillness of the noonday heat. The backdoorker didn't like the looks of the old place, at all; he wanted to get back to his little perch at the rear door. "Looks cool in here," we suggested. "You must be an iceberg to talk of it being cool, when any d—d fool knows its like an oven," was his painful and touching response. "Why, look at that flat, now," we remarked, pointing to a scene at the back of the stage; "now that, you surely will admit, looks nice and comfortable." "Why is that scene makes my blood run like melted lead whenever I look at it; why that's the infernal regions; don't you see the red flames and things—that's hell !" quoth the aged doorkeeper. "And yet it certainly has a refreshing look to me; why it actually reminds me of a frozen pond," we said. "How do you make a frozen pond out of such a hell of a scene !" asked the old man. "Because it is still on," was our next reply, which the doorkeeper enjoyed so much that he would have detained us all the afternoon had it not been that we were engaged to speak at the dinners in honor of Grant and Greeley; so we left the lonely old man to his reflections and beer. In fact, theatricals of all sorts look unwholesome and drooping although, to take a glance at our dramatic agencies, you wouldn't think so, for here everything wears a busy aspect, and managers and people meet on a common level and enter into negotiations as if the fate of the nation depended upon the results of their combined action. The arbitration at Geneva is nothing to it, and all who enter here do not leave hope behind, for many an actor, many an actress, who, on making their entrance into the dramatic agency with faint heart and gloomy anticipations, emerge with faces wreathed in smiles, and hearts made glad by engagements effected through the aid and instrumentality of the agency. It is a study to watch the faces of performers while awaiting the ipse dixit of managers. Let us hope that our friends who direct these theatrical agencies will "see the players well bestowed" for the business of the approaching season.....Talking about playthings, did you ever notice how much a bad drama resembles a horse? Hadn't you thought so? Well, it does, because they're both damned.....And this reference to the intense heat with which we have been afflicted convinces us that "Old Probabilities" is nothing to a free luncher for judging the weather, since the latter is an infallible bar-room-eater.....Some of our fellows the other night got hold of Shakespeare, and, to prove that he was the originator of modern burlesque, traced out a number of conplets such as he was in the habit of topping off his scenes with:

"I'll climb betimes without remorse or dread,
And my first step shall be on Henry's head."
—"Come on; in this there can be no dismay;
My ships come home a month before the day."
—"It is concluded. Banquo, thy soul's flight
If it find heaven, must find it out to-night."

Setting aside the consideration whether if the soul should find heaven out, it would ever be invited to call again, or whether a ship can come home a month before the day on which it arrives, we have hit upon what we think, upon a certain way of rendering the Bard of Avon popular. It is to re-write the whole batch in style somewhat similar to the following:—

Now is the winter of our discontent
Made glorious summer by the summer's spent,
And all the clouds that lowered upon our house,
In the deep bosom of the sea gone souse:
Now are our brows with wreaths victorious bound,
Our bruised arms for monuments hung round;
Our stern alarms changed to merry meetings,
Our dreadful marches into social greetings;
Grim-visaged war has smoothed his wrinkled front,
And he's exchanged his warlike steeds as war is his wont,
He in a lady's chamber capers nimbly,
And if her pa comes, scrambles up the chimbly!

—Aint that as good as Colley Cibber? What?.....Now that the jubilee is ended, and the stockholders are raking up the contents of the old stocking to help make good the losses sustained in this mammoth cave, we see that several of the foreign bands are doing a little biz on their own account at beer and other gardens, and the question naturally arises whether these bands were really what they were given out to be, or merely strung together for the occasion for the Boston market, which isn't very particular about the quality of the music if the organizations possess high-sounding names. Although none of these bands have been very long permitted to come to New York, yet they have nearly all visited the metropolis and given us a taste of their artistic ability, and the verdict is, that our own bands lose nothing in the comparison, and that we are really disappointed that the foreigners didn't come to better advantage, after all we have heard about foreign airs. Strauss has been here; he gave three soirees at our Academy of Music during the past week. As "Our Jim" is learning to play the German flute, we decided to go to the grand opening concert given under the direction of the famous waltz musician, and this is what the critique with has to say about it:—

STRAUSS'S CONCERTS.
As seen by "Our Jim."

After a small fiasco on Monday at the outdoors, the bald with head waltz king made his first appearance in this city, and we went to hear him. Strauss seems to be called in the pile Johann Strauss; but gentlemen don't go by a name like that, and that's my way of got him printed Johann Strauss, wen his rele name is Jon Straws; or, as us boys yused to us, Jak Straws, which is a innersant littel game familyer to orl yoothful boys, as yu wil se, and named after this heer konzikli musishiner. Bein' a artis meself, havin' already acted on the Dutch Roof the poplar locus sted as "daze of ole stath," and "cum ye sinners," I was chose out of a good meany uther old frords to atend the conserts givin by this Straw man, an sort sit down in mallis in mi sonis nur nuthin' a blush seein' as a fre tikkits was allowded to me as a sort of sarve to git us to be esy on the old gaintes, as yu must no; and I hav no dont I shud have prased em like hel, but the willyness kangaru of a dorekeper send me by me kote kobber and lower trowsers as I handid me tikket to this worm and stated parts him like I oaned the place; he sed I cooden go in, wen the dam fule nu I was in already, blast him; he sed the tikket wassent good, that it was a kounterfit, and sed I nu it. I felt cheps easy before a hole krowd of ded beds and nardless boom wus hired to apland the sho. In wane I tride to cowwints him boom I am; in wane I purtested agin this wantin fraud in the pashin. In angry wurds I proclaimed moself to be "OUR JIM" of the N Yerk Chipper (big tipes for "Our Jim," but smoof wuns for the uther). But nuthin diddent do no good; he shuk the breth out of me, and then sent me hedlong "out in the streets, mary, out in the streets." If ever a fre pess wus meerly yused, I wus him; a frend in nede is a frend indede, as I found to me surprise—as I reched the kirb stone, wun of nacher's nobelmen loged me a dollar, armd with wich I bort a nu tikkit, and gin the swag paymin dorekeper a basekit, for as I went bi him with fyin kulers and he lookt daggers at me as I sed in loud wurds:—"How air yu, ole gander?" I dont think mutch of Jack Straws, nor his infumus sho; as a indypendent riter for a fre pres, I jine mi voise agin sich meanity yused.

Sis Henrietta and Maude Howard. Miss Henrietta executed a neat song and dance, and proved an attractive card. Miss Howard gave a fair rendition of which was well received. Tilly Antonio, in song and dance, was exceedingly good and received a deserved share of applause. Miss Annie Sherwood sang in a loud voice several rather broad songs, which did not appear to be greatly relished. Charley Adams performed a song and dance in good style and made himself generally useful. The Misses Annie Sherwood and Tillie Antonio leave on the 13th, the latter going to Welch's, Detroit, and the former to Mich., Varieties. Prof. Fox, the St. Martin Sisters and the Lillian Sisters make their appearance on July 15th. So wrote our correspondent on July 10th.

AT THE DETROIT THEATRE CHRONICLE the weather seems to make no difference, for biz is very good. Billy Hart, the only new face on the 8th, made a fair impression. Bertha Foy rendered that new song, "Don't Go, Mollie Darling," beautifully, receiving several encores. Elise Scott, Ida Foy, Miss Lopez and troupe and not omitting Charley, the great Walters, fill up the balance of an excellent programme. On the 15th George R. Edeson, Minnie Rainforth, Will. C. Burton, Fred and Emily Siegel are announced, and the departures on the 13th are the Foy Sisters, to Buffalo, N. Y., Mme. Lopez and troupe and Dick Gorman. So wrote our correspondent on July 13th.

BROOM'S OPERA HOUSE is the only place of amusement now open in Memphis, Tenn. He has a first rate company, consisting of eight or ten female artists, half a dozen gentlemen and numerous supernumeraries. Eugene Gorman and his wife, nee Miss Susie Starr, re-appeared after a protracted absence and are greeted by a host of warm friends. Miss Ophelia Starr, danseuse, is also here. Miss Lizzie Lamereaux appears nightly in favorite songs and acts, which never fail to elicit enthusiastic applause. Miss Annie Clare, the statue fig dancer, is increasing in favor. Misses Albertini and Mayer are becoming great favorites. Geo. Wild, Charlie Ward and Chark Wilbo are the Ethiopian comedians, and between the three it would be difficult to say which is best. The sensation of the past two weeks has been the "Female Slave Market; or, Can-can Eclipsed," introduced here, we believe, by Mr. E. F. Gorman, who takes the character of the Pacha. So wrote our correspondent on July 11th.

AT THE WALNUT STREET THEATRE, Kansas City, Mo., on July 8th, the following new people opened, Maud De Lisle, serio comic vocalist; Maggie Louise, jig dancer; Maud Lewis, cantatrice; Johnny Bartley, bone soloist; Billy Banks, song and dance man, and Sam Graham, Ethiopian comedian. All the old people remain making one of the strongest variety companys in the west, business good.

AT THE ACADEMY OF MUSIC, Richmond, Va., the attendance, owing to the exceedingly warm weather, has been rather slim during the past week. R. Jean Buckley, an old favorite here, and Miss Dora Dawron, put in appearances on the 8th inst. Miss Dawron's specialty is to appear in costume, half man and half woman, and to change her voice in singing from one to the other, in both of which she sings remarkably well, especially the contralto. W. F. Deverdic's contortion acts fully entitle him to the name of the boneless man. Buckley's guitar solos are most acceptable. Miss Jerome and Messrs. Allen and Morris continue to please. Miss Annie Clare, jig dancer, is announced to open on the 15th. The entire company, with the exception of Miss Jerome, propose starting on the 18th, on a traveling tour through the state, opening at Charlottesville. This week we cannot hear having a second Lydia Thompson affair, to wit:—The cowhiding of an editor. It seems that the correspondent of the Norfolk Journal and a local reporter on one of our dailies, in his letter of the 6th inst., criticised the hall and its performances pretty severely, and Miss Jennie Jerome in particular, which so incensed that lady, that she, on the 8th inst., procured a cowhide and started for the sanctum of the aforesaid correspondent, who, having received intimation of her approach, and, considering discretion the better part of valor, made himself scarce. Miss Jerome was so persistent in her search, that the unlucky editor had to procure a warrant for her arrest on the 9th. The affair was settled by Miss Jerome being released upon her own recognizance, with the promise of keeping the peace to him and his, unless, as she said, he should write something else about her diminutive [?] (she weighs over 200 pounds) figure. So wrote our correspondent on July 13th.

LITTLE EDDIE MOORE, ballad singer, advertises that he can be engaged.

MILLIE SMITH, professionally known as Millie Rinsville, was married at New Haven, Conn., some time since to Frank Hartman, the lady is now playing with the latter at Smith's Opera House, East Saginaw, Mich., and Mr. Harrison is traveling with John O'Brien's Circus.

WOOD'S OPERA HOUSE, a new variety Theatre at Little Rock, Ark., was opened for the first time on July 8th. It will seat some five hundred people and is located in the central part of that city. The following is a list of the company and officers:—Lizzie Buchanan, vocalist and dancer; Maud Shephard, serio comedienne; Mary Wood, first rate jig dancer; Millie Zoe, dancer and vocalist; George Marretta, Ethiopian comedian and stage manager; Maxwell Lukey, Dutch comedian; Tommy Capper, song and dance; and Al. Grifith, bones. Manager, J. H. Wood; treasurer, Charles Radcliffe; machinist, John Meyer, and leader of orchestra, Oscar Frederick.

CLARA BURTON, jig and character danseuse, can be addressed as per advertisement.

GEO. L. HALL, stage manager, balladist, general performer, etc., whose address find elsewhere, can be engaged for the fall and winter season.

W. H. SHOOK advertises for a lady rope walker and trapeze performer.

TONY PASTOR'S COMBINATION opened at Nixon's Amphitheatre, Chicago, Ill., on July 8th to the largest audience ever inside the place. Every seat—standing room was occupied, no less than 500 persons were standing through the entire performance, and it has been crowded every night since, the average receipts reaching within a few dollars of the nightly rental. Mr. Pastor is satisfied, but as the hall had been misrepresented to him in respect to seating capacity, entrance, etc., he wisely threw up the place in favor of Nixon's. The Michigan Avenue Theatre is poorly calculated for any first class organization. Of the relative merits of this troupe, it is not too much to say that it is complete and its kind has never before shown up in Chicago. The programme consisted of popular songs by Tony Pastor, who is never let off with less than four encores; well rendered serio-comic songs by Jennie Engel; Ella Wesner in character changes that are of a superior nature; Kitty O'Neil, in a most artistic jig dance, which is commendable for neatness, grace of movement and modesty of execution; Harrigan and Hart, in their popular and well executed acts, "Big and Little of It" and "The Little Frauds;" M'lle Fontainebleau, in a very clever trapeze act; Billy Carter, in a banjo solo; Frank Kerns, Frank Girard and Johnny Manning, in negro acts, and Prof. O'Reardon, the tumblerorician. The billing is certainly stupendous and reflects credit on Mr. Roberts. The success they are meeting with has warranted them in changing their route somewhat and remaining here another week. Their route ahead is as follows:—Springfield, 22d; Peoria, 23d; Bloomington, 24th; Milwaukee, 25th, 26th and 27th. So wrote our correspondent on July 12th.

ADA CLAYTON AND MISS SADIE LLOYD—formerly Mrs. Harry Blood—were married at Cincinnati, O., July 10th. They are both members of the company at the Race Street Varieties.

THE VARIETY PERFORMANCE at the Museum, Boston, Mass., under the management of Robert Fox, of Philadelphia, has drawn very well during the past week. Robert Craig appeared in his specialty of the "Widow's Victim," R. D. Dawr'es, the ventriloquist, and Sargent, the illusionist, added their skill to fill out a capital entertainment. They remain one week more, and then the theatre will be closed.

VALENTINE LOVE and Nellie Maskell, character change vocalists and general comedians; Josie Farren and Jennie Eagan, danseuses, and H. W. Eagan, Ethiopian comedian, were the additions to the company at the Metropolitan Hall, Washington, D. C., on the 6th instant. The programme presented during the week was unusually excellent, and in consequence, although the weather was excessively warm and uncomfortable, business was better than it had been for some time past. In the minstrel scene the indefatigable Porter assumed the bone end, Love the position of interrogator, and Eagan manipulated the tambo. The end songs and witticisms were fully up to the standard, and the singing of Nellie Maskell and Agnes Robinson was of such a nature as to elicit well deserved plaudits. In the olio Josie Farren and Jennie Eagan, two uncommonly well formed and graceful young ladies, executed a pas de deux in an artistic manner, and the latter also did a skipping rope dance that was both neat and novel. The clever protean changes of Valentine Love and Nellie Maskell, and the pretty dances of Josephine Walby, made up the other noticeable features of the evening's performance, which concluded with a farce entitled "Seeking a Wife," by Valentine Love. The Sorento sisters, Gilded and Amelia, are announced to appear on July 15th. Agnes Robinson and Josephine Walby closed on the 13th, with no engagement ahead. Miss Walby is going to Saratoga to spend a short time with some friends. On Tuesday, the 16th, a benefit is to be given to Johnny Keegan, who is still confined to his bed at the Providence Hospital. In addition to the regular company the following named performers have volunteered their services and will appear:—James S. Edwards, character singer; Charley Howard, A. J. Talbot and Charley Brown, Ethiopian comedians, and Billy Harris, Johnny Bowman and Alfred Mc Dowell, song and dance men. A feature of the female (?) minstrel scene will be eight end men. So wrote our correspondent on July 14th.

THE ALHAMBRA THEATRE, Chicago, Ill., went up in a balloon on the 6th.

Negro Minstrelsy.

SAM. SANFORD'S MINSTRELS closed their season at Allentown, Pa., during the past week.

SAM. SHARPLEY'S MINSTRELS commenced a season of one week at the Chestnut Street Theatre, Philadelphia, on the 8th inst. In the first part all appeared with white faces except the two end men, Sam. Sharpley and Neise Seymour. Frank Campbell, C. S. Fredericks, Charles Henry, Monroe Dempster and Carl Rudolph executed in an excellent manner their respective ballads, and the comic ditties and sparkling witticisms of Sharpley and Seymour elicited much laughter and applause. In the second part, Rankin and Wilson appeared in songs and dances, and a clog hornpipe by Sam. Sharpley gave some of his original banjo solos, and Wm. Henry Rice's burlesque prima donna act was rewarded with richly deserved applause. The other most salient features were the sketches of "Jack Cade" and "The Mash Hunters," in which Neise Seymour and Sam. Sharpley appeared to much advantage. A fair house was present on the opening night, but business fell off afterwards, and the season ended on the 13th.

EMERSON'S CALIFORNIA MINSTRELS commenced an engagement at Masonic Temple, Louisville, Ky., on the 8th, and will continue throughout the week. The company is large, the programme replete with novelties, and they have the charming peculiarity of cutting entirely free from the stereotyped platitudes and dull efforts as will generally characterizing minstrel troupes. They do not tread in the old footsteps, but go in with a new, brilliant, fresh and sparkling repertoire. On Monday night the Temple was crowded to overflowing. The programme contained a choice miscellany of songs, dancing, musical interludes and comic acts; each performer acquitted himself in a manner worthy of the highest praise, and called forth the most enthusiastic plaudits from the audience. As a comedian Billy Emerson has few, if any, superiors in the profession, and his performances are always new and amusing. His associate comedian, Fayette Welch, is well deserving to be shared his success. Cotton and Kemble joined the troupe here, to take M. Wilburn's place, as he remained in Chicago, Ill., with the Arlington, Cotton and Kemble party. Cotton and Kemble's comic sketch, "The Actor and Novice," was one of the most amusing features of the entertainment. Sheridan and Mack, in their songs and dances, carry their audience by storm. Stanwood's banjoism is excellent, and his songs were new and good. The entertainment concluded with "Wachtel," introducing the wonderful soprano, C. Heywood, and the whole company. The company open in Cincinnati on the 15th, for one week.....Billy Manning severed his connection with Manning's Minstrels here on the 6th. His continued intemperate habits obliged the manager to get another person to fill or rather try and fill his place. So wrote our correspondent on July 11th.

CAL. WORREN'S MINSTRELS performed at Albany, N. Y., July 8th, and are announced at Troy, Pa., for the 22d.

H. S. LEAVITT'S MINSTRELS performed at Manchester, N. H., July 12th; Nashua, 13th; and will be at Lowell, Mass., 15th; Lawrence, 16th; Methuen, 17th, and Haverhill, 18th.

BRYANT'S MINSTRELS performed at Pittsburgh, Pa., July 12th and 13th, and are billed to perform at Baltimore, Md., 15th and 16th.

BILLY EMERSON'S Minstrels open for a week at Pike's Opera House, Cincinnati, on the 15th. They are billing very heavily.

BILLY MANNING has severed his connection with the party bearing his name, and that they will hereafter be known as Newcomb's Minstrels, it is reported.

AT THE ALHAMBRA, SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.; the Simmons and Slocum's Minstrels produced on July 1st, a new burlesque, "The Great City; or, Across the Plains," which contained many elements of success, and was placed on the stage with some pretensions to scenic effect. The negro melodies introduced in it, as sung by Swordsman, Simmons and Slocum, were received with enthusiasm. Swordsman has deservedly become a favorite; he is a quaint genius and is one of the few remaining minstrels who realises a type of the plantation darkey. Next week, commencing July 8th, an immense troupe will appear, the present one being re-inforced by Dave Wambold, tenor singer; Coal Burgess, comedian; Charles Sutton, big shoe dancer, and Ainsley Scott. These performers, with Ad. Ryman, Sam Rickey, Sweetnam, Simmons, Slocum, Welch, Rice and Russell, baritone singer, will form an extraordinary combination, and the flocking of great crowds to the Alhambra may be looked for even for a long time. Dave Wambold was famous here years ago, and he alone will draw admirers by hundreds. So wrote our correspondent on July 6th.

DUPREE AND BENEDICT'S MINSTRELS gave an entertainment at Harrisburg, Pa., on July 12th, to a crowded house. The first part introduced seventeen people, with Benedict and Edwards on the ends, and Mr. James Gellick in the middle. The witticisms of Benedict and Edwards kept the audience in a continual roar of laughter, while the singing of Dumont, Harcourt and Bernardo was excellent. Ernest Linden's impersonations of Mlle. Nilsson and Parepa Rosa were cleverly done, being encored several times. His make-up is good, and singing above the average. The entertainment concluded with "Love in All Corners," introducing Benedict, Edwards, Lindsey, Gulick, Dumont and others. The company were at Lancaster on the 13th and 15th, and are billed for Pottsville, 16th; Hazleton, 17th; Wilkesbarre, 18th; Plymouth, 19th; Towanda, 20th; Waverly, 22d; Elmira, N. Y., 23d; Binghamton, 24th; Scranton, Pa., 25th and 26th; Allentown, 27th, and opening on the 29th in Philadelphia for one week. So wrote our correspondent on July 13th.

Circuses.

LENT'S NEW YORK CIRCUS is billed to show at Kansas City, Mo., August 2d and 3d.

CONKLIN BRO.'S CIRCUS exhibited at Sturgeon Bay, Wis., on July 6th. They are to exhibit at Duluth, July 12th.

J. E. WARNER AND CO.'S MUSEUM, MENAGERIE AND CIRCUS were exhibited at Nashville, Ind., July 8th; Bloomington, 9th; Spencer, 10th; Worthington, 11th; Bowling Green, 12th; Brazil, 13th, and are billed ahead at Rockville, 15th; Newport, 16th, and Clinton, 17th. Jolly Ben Magginley, the clown, and Miss Marie Elise, the dashing rider, are among the chief attractions.

KLECKNER AND CO.'S CIRCUS, MUSEUM AND MENAGERIE are billed to be exhibited at Northumberland, Pa., July 15th; Middleburg, 16th; Mifflinburg, 17th; Millheim, 18th; Centre Hall, 19th, and Bellefonte, 20th.

ALEX. ROBINSON'S NEW YORK STATE CIRCUS performed at Bedford, Pa., July 13th, and is billed at Stoystown, 15th; Laughlintown, 16th; Latrobe, 17th, thence to Altoona.

THE GREAT EASTERN CIRCUS, MUSEUM AND MENAGERIE are billed ahead as follows:—Belleville, Ill., July 27th; Edwardsville, Ind., 29th; Litchfield, 30th; Occature, 31st; Pekin, Aug. 1st; Lincoln, 2d; Danville, 5th; Attica, 6th; Lafayette, Ind., 7th; Delphi, 8th; Logansport, 9th; Peru, 10th; Wabash, 12th; Huntingdon, 13th; Fort Wayne, 14th; Defiance, O., 15th, and Toledo, 16th.

AN EMEUTE between the attaches of Dan Rice's Paris Pavilion Circus and Backenstose's show is said to have recently occurred. The Dubuque, Iowa, Herald is responsible for the following account of it:—

It will be remembered that the first circus that exhibited in Dubuque this season was the Backenstose company, among whom was a former ring master of Dan Rice, and also Dan's wife, who appears to have gone over to the Philistine's out of choice. Dan Rice's Circus was in Dubuque on June 19th and 20th, and went to McGregor, and spread their tents in that city on the 24th. Backenstose's company reached Prairie du Chien, on the opposite side of the river, and exhibited on the same day. There is no love of esprit de corps between the two companies. The sages have told how much worse than any bubbling hell is a woman's hate. Dan Rice's wife, if reports be true, is no exception to the rule, and makes things red hot actively for her husband and friends whenever she has an opportunity. On that day, it is said, at her instigation, a party of men belonging to Backenstose's Circus crossed the river from Prairie du Chien to McGregor, and going to the grounds where Dan Rice's exhibited, picked a quarrel with the men, and a general fight ensued, in which there were not less than forty men engaged on either side. For a while there was a scene of bloody riot that beggars description, and would have ended in loss of life had not the authorities of McGregor interfered and put a stop to it. Nine of the men were arrested and sent to jail, and the others made good their escape. As it was, a few got off without broken noses, bunged and blackened eyes and swollen mouths.

AT THE CLOSING OF NIXON'S CIRCUS, at Chicago, Ill., on July 6th, according to the Chicago Tribune,

There was quite a commotion behind the canvas. At the conclusion of the third performance Mr. Stokes, the ringmaster, approached Mr. Nixon and demanded pay for his services, amounting to $1,600. Mr. Nixon, he claims, refused to give it, whereupon he (Stokes) seized the contents of the cash box, in the treasurer's office—between $700 and $800—took his "blind horse," and with other novelties belonging to him as performed in the show, and departed from the establishment. It is expected that a rich lawsuit will grow out of these strange proceedings. Mr. Stokes, however, does not seem to be the only one who is dissatisfied with Mr. Nixon's management, from a financial standpoint, as the treasurer of the hippodrome, Orlando Collett, is also said to be unjustly held by the proprietor. About 11 o'clock that night Mr. Collett, treasurer of the hippodrome, Orlando Collett, called at the police to obtain their personal property, as they wished to depart on an early train in the morning. The authorities, as a matter of course, informed them they had no jurisdiction except in cases where a breach of the peace was committed, or a warrant sworn out. The trouble with the 'Japs' seems to have been that Mr. Nixon, or his authorized agents, refused to pay them their salaries until this morning. Such was the substance of their statement at the police station."

COLE'S MUSEUM, MENAGERIE AND HIPPODROME performed at Oswego, N. Y., July 10th; Fulton's' 11th; Baldwinsville, 12th; Jorda, 13th, and is billed for Syracuse, 15th; Cazenovia, 16th, and De Ruyter, 17th.

JOHN HENRY COOKE, performing with Lent's New York Circus, is thus spoken of by the Milwaukee, Wis., News:

Yesterday morning the peregrinations of the beautiful golden chariot, drawn by a stronger team of horses and containing Boswold's fine band, announced that the New York Circus had arrived. The bareback riding on six splendid horses by John Henry Cooke was really very beautiful and replete with startling and graceful features.

ADAM FORPAUGH'S GRAND AGGREGATION has been meeting with immense success in northern Illinois and southern Wisconsin. At Janesville, on July 4th, the crowd was the largest ever seen in that city, the receipts, it is said, reaching nearly six thousand dollars. The show was at Milwaukee, July 9th and 10th, and the following correspondence, which explains itself, we find in the Sentinel of that city for the 7th inst.:—

MILWAUKEE, July 5th, 1872.

TO BRIGADIER GENERAL JOHN WOOLEY, DEPUTY GOVERNOR NATIONAL ASYLUM FOR DISABLED SOLDIERS.—GENERAL,—In appreciation of the services and sacrifices of the soldiers who so nobly defended their country when in peril, permit me to invite the nation's guests in your charge to attend as exhibition of my menagerie and museum, in this city, on Wednesday, July 10th, at 10 o'clock, A. M. I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your ob't serv't, ADAM FORPAUGH.

MILWAUKEE, July 6th, 1872.

ADAM FORPAUGH, Esq., PROPRIETOR OF FORPAUGH'S MENAGERIE, MUSEUM, &C.—MY DEAR SIR.—I am in receipt of your kind invitation, dated yesterday, saying that you will be glad to give the old soldiers an exhibition of your menagerie on the 10th inst. For them I am glad to say that the invitation is received in the same spirit that it is sent, and the morning being fair we shall be there. Thanking you for your kindness, I have the honor to be, very respectfully, JOHN WOOLEY, Deputy Governor.

JAMES ROBINSON is training a buffalo calf, called Blondin, which he captured near Denver, Col., for his son Clarence to do a hurdle act upon. It is said that the buffalo proves an apt pupil and leaps bars and gates with ease. The act will be performed in public in about four weeks.

JOHN HENRY COOKE, of Lent's New York Circus, who recently met with a severe accident, has recovered from his injuries and re-joined that show.

THE QUEEN CITY CIRCUS, under the management of Mike Lipman, collapsed at Norfolk, Va., during the week ending July 6th. Some sixty men without a dollar were suddenly thrown out of employment. During that week many attachments were served upon the property, and affairs finally culminated in a grand "burst up." Among the people thrown out of engagements were Mme. Tony Denaire and daughter; Joan Johnson, clown; Misco and Ball, trapeze; William Nichols, pad rider; the Zitella family, Frank Whittaker, Mons. Segrino, Painter and Durand, and Wilcox, clown.

HOWE'S LONDON CIRCUS and Sanger's English Menagerie opened at Portland, Me., July 13th, for two days. They make a fine street parade, but their performances are hardly up to the standard. So says our correspondent, writing on July 15th.

S. O. STOKES, and Mitchell, agent of the Japanese troupe, have formed a combination which is to be called Stokes and Mitchell's Roman Hippodrome and Circus. They are doing business this week at Chicago, Ill., on the south side, and are meeting with indifferent success. The company will start out on the road July 15th, as follows:—St. Joseph, Mich. 16th; South Haven, 16th; Saugatuck, 17th; Grand Haven, 18th; Muskegan, 19th, and Whitehall, 20th. S. S. Babcock is the general agent; James Duncan, late with Manning's Minstrels, assistant; agent. The Royal Yeddo Japs, Stokes Family, Prof. Chapman and trained ponies, and the greater portion of the late Nixon's Circus Company are engaged to travel with the above troupe. So wrote our correspondent on July 12th.

BARNUM'S SHOW performed at Hamilton, O., July 13th, and is billed ahead as follows:—Richmond, Ind., 15th; Cincinnati, O., 16th, 17th, 18th and 19th; Covington, Ky., 20th; Aurora, Ind., 22d; Jeffersonville, 23d; Louisville, Ky., 24th and 25th; New Albany, Ind., 26th; Columbus, 27th; Indianapolis, 29th and 30th; Terre Haute, 31st; Vincennes, Aug. 1st; Evansville, 2d, and Washington, 3d.

ALL tenting shows that exhibit at Kokomo, Ind., are exempt from city license.

JAMES ROBINSON'S CIRCUS gave two exhibitions at Fort Wayne, Ind., July 10th, the performances delighting the large audiences assembled on both occasions. If you please, the acts of the Robinson Family surpassed their previous efforts, James Robinson riding as he never rode before in this city. The Masters Clarence and Eugene were enthusiastically received, and are undoubtedly among the rarest jewels of the arena. In fact, the entire exhibition is pronounced the best that ever been here, every act receiving unanimous applause. Wm. Burke, the clown, was in his happiest vein and won good will on every side. He has improved wonderfully since his last appearance here. Rogue Hensel as follows:—Jackson, Mich. 11th; Marshall, 12th; Battle Creek, 13th; Kalamazoo, 14th; Grand Rapids, 15th. Business good. So wrote our correspondent on July 11th.

VAN AMBURGH & CO.'S MENAGERIE exhibits in Pittsburgh, Pa., on the 6th and 8th, and Allegheny City on the 9th.

G. G. GRADY'S CIRCUS performed at Warsaw, Ind., 12th; Pierceton, 13th, and is billed ahead as follows:—Columbia City, 15th; Albion, 16th; Ligonier, 17th; Goshen, 18th; Elkhart, 19th; South Bend, 20th; Cassopolis, Mich., 22d; White Pigeon, 23d; Lagrange, Ind., 24th; Angola, 25th; Edgerton, Ohio, 26th; Auburn, Ind., 27th; Fort Wayne, 29th. Business reported good.

P. T. BARNUM has tendered to both political parties the use of his monster tents after the conclusion of the afternoon performances, for the purpose of holding meetings in all the cities and towns that he may visit.

SELLS BROTHERS' CIRCUS exhibited at Peru, Ind., July 10th, and Galveston, 11th.

MRS. LOUIS HENING died in Jersey City, N. J., of sunstroke on July 5th. He was the father of Mrs. Cecilia Berry, now traveling with Bailey's Circus, and of Miss Marie, at present performing with Barnum's show.

PARTIES ADDRESSING THE CLIPPER either upon business or for the purpose of giving information of their routes ahead, are particularly requested to give the name of the show they are connected with. We have of late received several letters containing such information, but as the several letters containing such information, but as the name of the show was not given nor the writer's name to be found in our annual record, they have proved valueless.

G. W. ROTH'S CHANCERY CITY CIRCUS exhibited at Peru, Ind., July 9th; Rochester, 10th, and Plymouth, 11th.

FOREIGN SHOW NEWS.

Dramatic.

FROM MANCHESTER, ENG., we have a letter as promised, from Mons. La Thorne, and dated June 28th, in which he gives a digest of what he has seen in the amusement world. He says:—Manchester is a manufacturing city of 350,000 souls, and is a handsome, a thriving business place, the fourth largest city in the kingdom, the centre of the cotton trade, with warehouses and store buildings of immense extent. There are also several Theatres and music halls, liberally patronized. The Prince's Royal—the principal theatre here—they were playing Boucicault's piece of The Flying Scud,' Mr. G. Belmore and the London company appearing in it to first rate business. The Princess's Theatre they were doing 'Genevieve de Brabant,' with Miss Emily Soldene, the London Philharmonic company, and a fine ballet. Business good. At the Queen's—a second class place of amusement—they were doing a sensational drama entitled 'A Quarter of a Million of Money,' with business only so so. At the Alhambra Music Hall, a good variety show with singing, dancing, acrobats. Ballet and business excellent. There is also a free public library, reading room, museum, pleasure grounds, boats, &c. Admittance, six pence. This is a day show and closes at dusk, and is very extensively patronised by strangers. My next halt at Derby was very brief, as it is a very dull place; next at Leicester, one of the old historical cities, and the centre of the hosiery, shoe and elastic fabric manufactories. It is a pretty, clean, well built and thriving place. It has a pretty little theatre and a large music hall. The latter was occupied on my visit by the Prince of Wales' Christy Minstrels. Rawlinson and Ernest, managers, with the great Joe Brown, the American jig dancer, and a party of twelve professionals from the London Pavilion Music Hall, and a splendid entertainment and were liberally patronised. A traveling dramatic company was playing at the theatre, but I did not go to see them. My next stop was at Coventry, where placarded pictorial bills of a cricket match between Married and Single clowns, were on the walls, Arrowsmith and Sam Lathrop. How is that for ubiquity? They have even Peeping Tom a new suit since I last saw him. From here I passed for London, where I arrived on the 25th.

OTIS ROBINSON, bear dude of June 29th, at the London, Eng., theatres but few changes have occurred. John C. Freund's new drama, entitled the "Undergraduate," which was produced at the Queen's first of the month, is spoken of as "Monday Next."—So far as the play has any power whatever, it is a mere hash of old and often used materials; so far as it is original it is extravagant, coarse and exaggerated. There is no pretence to dramatic consistency in the early scenes, which serve rather to impede the progress of the story than to aid in its development. For can there be in any drama a more glaring piece of burlesque, seeing that mere accident or caprice makes the hero an undergraduate instead of a cornet. The story is as follows:—Sir John Devenant and his brother, Charles, are undergraduates at Fern's College, Oxford. At the opening of the scene Sir John has received a visit from his mother, of whom he is somewhat in fear, and from his cousin, Lucy Clifford, in whom, however, his brother's interest is strongest. The latter, who is also a ward, apparently a visitor at the university is a Captain Humphrey Marner, a gentleman who plays cards with 'the advantages,' as a Mississippi gambler would phrase it, or who, according to European morals knows how to cheat at cards. This worthy has been turned out of the regiment for cheating, of which Sir John's father was colonel, and has since cherished a grudge against all members of the deceased family. He first tries to plunder Sir John at cards, but his winnings, though considerable, are not sufficient to gratify his appetite either for money or revenge. During the duel, however, Sir John gets tipsy—a habit apparently among the peculiarities of his enemy, while he is sleeping, acquires the secret of a love intrigue in which he is engaged. Sir John has, indeed, made advances to Polly Stapleton, the niece of Joe Goodlake, a college scout, who, on account of the publicity of the matter, no less than those of other 'varsity' servants, is known as Gentleman Joe. Polly's heart is given to her aristocratic admirer, and the clandestine meetings are so frequent as to prove that fear of the proctor is a very powerful punishment for love. Marner, meditating a way where the knowledge of the secret he has acquired, Marner succeeds in giving rise to a certain amount of scandal. He then points out to Sir John how seriously the future of the girl is compromised, and with little difficulty succeeds in persuading him that it is advisable he should elope with her. Though averse from the idea of an elopement, Polly listens to the suggestions of her lover, and, nothing yielding, Sir John is easily carried off the field. At the moment when Marner is gloating over the success of his schemes of vengeance, a pleasure the more exquisite, doubtless, as it is shared by no one else, the efficacy of the vengeance, or the fact that it is a vengeance, does not appear, Joe Goodlake enters. From him the captain learns that the girl whose ruin he has been so adroitly preparing and executing, is his own daughter. He had in early life contracted a marriage with a certain Mary Hargreaves, whom he subsequently deserted. The result of his union had been the birth of a daughter, the very girl with whom Sir John is now levanting. The paternal bowels, not very apt hitherto to such manifestations, yearn over the girl found and lost at the same moment, and the latter resolves upon a scheme of vengeance. This is utterly needless, in fact, since Sir John, although like his brother, he gets tipsy, is at heart a very moral man, and his elopement has other aim than always that of matrimony. For family reasons, however, the match is kept a secret, and the scene at the beginning of the third act opens upon an establishment of a very suspicious nature, in a dock at Folly, at which Sir John is with the connivance of his flight. Folly has the misgivings, and asks again and again her lover to make some sacrifice in her behalf. As often is she put off. It is, however, the publication of Sir John's marriage to Mary Hargreaves that settles Folly's misgivings. When Folly is alone she is visited very furtively by Gentleman Joe, who does not appear to merit his title since he enters twice by the window instead of the door. Once in the second time he persuades Polly to leave her Noel of gilded infamy. As might be expected, he is not very successful in his efforts. Sir John, meanwhile, has gone to meet Marner, ignorant of the relation in which they stood to each other. For his reception, which, considering the character of the gentleman he arrives, accordingly, the door is carefully locked behind him, and then, with a pistol leveled at his head, the young baronet is commanded to marry Polly straight off. Marner, as we may say, is a bold villain, and is married to the fair Polly on the following day. Far too brave to be coerced into doing what has already been done, Sir John refuses to acquiesce in the demands of his adversary and cries for aid. The pistol is discharged but misses fire. Ere a second can be drawn Sir John seizes his sword-stick, and a hand to hand encounter ensues. This would be decided in favor of the older man but for the arrival of aid. With this, of course, comes explanation. The marriage of Sir John and Polly is acknowledged, and other marriages are shown by way of compensation to be in the future. Lastly, he has an emotive being, in almost every scene, inadequate to action. Thoroughly and intensely dramatic is the situation of Triboulet when he finds he has betrayed his master, Francis I., to the jealous fury of Marmet, about a girl for whom he has never cared, and by hatred to Sir John, who has merely followed his counsels. The catastrophe impossible.....Paul Pry was revived at the Strand on June 29th, with W. H. Clarke as the chief character. "Aladdin," burlesque, with Miss Chambers and Mr. Terry in the principal characters had also been reproduced.

J. B. Howe had acted Claude Melnotte and Hamlet at the Queen's.....Miss Rainforth had been performing at the Pavilion.....At the Britannia had been produced, "Parted and Re-united," the latest production from the prolific pen of Mr. Harlewood, and very little surprise will be excited when we say that that little story is the old one of husband and wife.....The plot or groundwork of the piece has been taken from the French, and has been made use of by one or two dramatists for their productions. In the present instance one Harold O'Halloran, residing in Ireland, has accomplished a marriage, and parts with his wife and daughter a home in Australia. There he acts as a guide. Mrs. O'Halloran is an heiress in her own right—in fact, a countess—but does not become aware of her favored position till her husband is supposed to be lost in the bush. Meanwhile a very good looking gentleman named Vivier. The arch-plotter of the piece is one Redmond, who causes the soldier's death, and, shortly after, under a disguise, marries the widow of O'Halloran, but finds little difficulty succeeds in persuading him that it is advisable he should elope with her. Though averse from the idea of an elopement, Polly listens to the suggestions of her lover, and, nothing yielding, is easily carried off the field. At the moment when Marner is gloating over the success of his schemes of vengeance, a pleasure the more exquisite, doubtless, as it is shared by no one else, the efficacy of the vengeance, or the fact that it is a vengeance, does not appear, Joe Goodlake enters. From him the captain learns that the girl whose ruin he has been so adroitly preparing and executing, is his own daughter. He had in early life contracted a marriage with a certain Mary Hargreaves, whom he subsequently deserted. The result of his union had been the birth of a daughter, the very girl with whom Sir John is now levanting. The paternal bowels, not very apt hitherto to such manifestations, yearn over the girl found and lost at the same moment, and the latter resolves upon a scheme of vengeance. This is utterly needless, in fact, since Sir John, although like his brother, he gets tipsy, is at heart a very moral man, and his elopement has other aim than always that of matrimony. For family reasons, however, the match is kept a secret, and the scene at the beginning of the third act op
